

Several Defendants Are Sentenced in Court Here Following Guilty Pleas

Orlando Costello Pleads Guilty To Abduction And Is Sentenced To Clinton Prison For a Term of Three to Six Years.

OTHER SENTENCES

Work of Criminal Calendar Practically Concluded With Exception of Case of Sidney Myers.

Several more pleas of guilty were entered when County Court resumed at two o'clock Monday afternoon. Judge Frederick G. Traver presiding and pronouncing sentence. The court room was crowded in the expectation that the case against Orlando Costello would go to trial.

The first arraignment by District Attorney Murray was that of Frank Nastasi, 25, of New York, indicted for burglary in the third degree and unlawful entry. Through his attorney, Arthur B. Ewig, he withdrew his plea of not guilty and pleaded guilty to the lesser charge. Judge Traver said that the prisoner's record was not so good and he sentenced him to an indeterminate term at hard labor in Clinton Prison at Dannemora for not less than one year and six months and not more than three years.

The district attorney then moved the case of the People against Robert Simpson, 19, and Edward Simpson, 18, both of New Paltz, who were arrested for participation in the same crime as Nastasi. Both withdrew their pleas of not guilty to burglary and unlawful entry and pleaded guilty to the second charge. Because the two youths had no previous record and on the recommendation of the district attorney the judge said that he would show leniency and each was given a sentence of two and a half months in the Ulster county jail. The Simpsons and Nastasi were arrested by Sergeant Lockhart July 6 last year, following robbery July 3 of a road-stand in the town of Gardiner.

In the case of Frank Brayton, the district attorney moved the case over to the April term, saying that he wanted to try the three defendants concerned in this case at one time. The others are John Knorr and Isidor Paradis.

Costello Sentenced

Orlando Costello was arraigned and his attorney, Judge William D. Brinler, withdrew his plea of not guilty to rape, second degree, and pleaded guilty to abduction. Judge Traver said that Costello, a married man, had pleaded guilty to a serious charge, his case involving an assault on a young girl and that he was not inclined to be lenient. He gave Costello an indeterminate sentence to Clinton prison, for a term of not less than three nor more than six years.

Donald A. Scribner of Woodstock, charged under several counts for burglaries in Woodstock, was arraigned and through his attorney, Walter J. Miller, pleaded not guilty. His attorney was given 20 days in which to demur to the indictments. Scribner's bail was continued.

The district attorney announced that this practically concluded the work of the criminal calendar with the exception of the case against Sidney B. Myers, who had not, he said, been apprehended. He stated that Myers' bail of $1,000 had been forfeited and that he still intended to apprehend him and bring him to trial.

Remnant of Civil Calendar.

Judge Traver said that there was a remnant of the civil calendar that he was ready to take up if wanted.

Mr. Murray stated that No. 49, George S. Van Schaick, Supt. of Insurance, etc., against Claude H. Christians, was in process of settlement.

No. 19, Walter R. Clarke, et al. vs. Charles Matrazzo, and No. 46, Carl Cosen vs. George Burkett and Fred Rosenfelder, were ordered stricken off the day calendar. In No. 51, Ralph V. G. Longyear vs. Stanley E. Longyear, N. LoVan Haver, plaintiff's attorney, was anxious to try the case, but Andrew L. Cook, attorney for the defendant, said that he had to leave town Wednesday and could not possibly get ready to try the case at this time. It went over to the April term.

There was one other case left on the calendar. No. 22, Isidore Miller and Arnold Greenspan, co-partners trading under the firm name and style of Ellenville Auto Sales vs. Hubert Kelly and Keller Wood, an action for replevin. Joseph Koepferman, attorney for the plaintiff, was present and an inquest was ordered.

Plaintiff Awarded $200.

Arnold Greenspan was sworn, and questioned by Attorney Koepferman testified that in January, 1934, his firm contracted to sell to Hubert Kelly a Dodge truck, consideration to be $365 cash and an allowance of $20 for an old Rep truck. Later he said the Dodge Company raised the price $45, making a total price of $410. On April 7 of that year, the witness testified, Kelly took the truck, claiming that he wanted to show it to his wife. He said that Kelly never brought the truck back, had never paid anything on it and was still using it. He also testified that the truck had been registered in the name of Keller Wood. He said that the present value of the truck was $224. The plaintiff was awarded $200.

Old Guards vs. Liberals Fight To Be Waged at Meeting Thursday

Old Guards Seek to Oust Miss Lillian A. Garing From State Committee for "Liberal" Activities—She Seeks to Oust La Fayette B. Gleason, State Secretary, as "Unfit" to Serve.

Treasury Officials Report Increase In Smuggling

Washington, Jan. 22 (AP).—Treasury officials have called to the attention of members of Congress increased smuggling in all lines, some of it backed by the "lords of crime."

Customs Bureau and Coast Guard spokesmen testified, during hearings on the Treasury Department appropriations bill, that liquor smuggling had been gaining rapidly since March, after falling off in the wake of repeal. The testimony was made public today when the bill went to the House.

Traffic in aliens, narcotics and criminals was described as linked closely with the liquor trade. Commander S. V. Parker of the Coast Guard estimated that liquor smuggling at the present rate meant an annual revenue loss of $50,000,000 or $60,000,000. He added that 15 to 20 vessels operate off the coast north of the Carolinas in an active week and perhaps five in southern waters.

To combat smuggling, the committee allowed the Coast Guard $4,414,000 more for the 1936 fiscal than was approved last year.

Mais, Legenza Await Death at Richmond for Truck Driver Killing

Richmond, Va., Jan. 22 (AP).—Two haggard, pasty-faced gangsters—Robert Mais and Walter Legenza—come back to Richmond today to die in the electric chair for the murder of E. M. Huband, Federal Reserve Bank truck driver.

Legenza, on a stretcher, both legs broken; the emaciated Mais, his right eye blackened, came back prisoners to the city from which several months ago they shot their way to freedom.

Guarded by ten federal agents, armed with machine guns and tear gas, the tri-state gangsters came in on a railroad train and were whisked away in an ambulance and a police car to their death cells in the state penitentiary. Soon—probably early next month—these two gangsters, accused of a multitude of crimes in Pennsylvania, Maryland, Washington and Virginia, will die in the electric chair.

Ten minutes after they were placed in police cars at Broad street station, the gangsters arrived at the state penitentiary where they were delivered to Superintendent Rice M. Youell. First came Mais, nervous, haggard, weighing 20 pounds less than he did when he shot his way to freedom and still carrying in his body six bullets that police shot into him before his trial in Richmond.

Three federal men, one pointing a machine gun at him, escorted the prisoner into the penitentiary. He limped down the echoing hallway, his legs in irons, his hands cuffed.

Behind him came Legenza on a stretcher. His face was pasty under the prison lights. He drew his pink and white striped blanket close to his chin.

Inside the foyer, the procession halted while guards procured keys to the death cell. Even inside the penitentiary police never relaxed their vigilance. A menacing machine gun was trained on the men and other armed agents watched them closely.

Mais sat, dejected, on a bench. Federal men grouped about him. A moment later he and Legenza went to their death cells.

Strike Situation Still Unsettled

No Strike Called in Shirt Industry Yet in Kingston—Union Has Threatened Stoppage If 10 Per Cent Increase Is Not Granted.

There has been no strike called here as yet in the shirt industry. It was stated at union headquarters this noon. The local union recently stated that there would be a stoppage of work if the workers were not granted the 10 per cent increase under the code. The union workers will hold a meeting this evening.

Inquiry at the local union headquarters brought out the statement that the average pay in Kingston at the present time was $13 a week, but from other sources it was stated that the average pay was $14 for a 40-hour week.

Three factories that would be affected if there was a general strike are the Fuller and Jacobson plants, who manufacture shirts, and the Manhattan plant, which turns out pajamas.

The three factories employ about 1,200 people and the average pay in Kingston is approximately $20.00 a week.

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 22 (AP).—The old battle of Liberals versus "Old Guards" today appeared once more to threaten harmony within New York State Republican ranks as followers of former State Republican Chairman W. Kingsland Macy prepared to fight a reported move to oust them from the State Committee.

The thrust opening up old wounds believed healed by the ministrations of Melvin C. Eaton, Macy's successor as state chairman, came from Lafayette B. Gleason, state secretary, who demanded Miss Lillian A. Garing, member of the State Committee from Queens, resign because of her position as vice chairman of the "Liberal Republican State Committee", an organization supporting Macy.

Eaton added to the controversy with a statement that he believed "Miss Garing would be ousted from the committee for party disloyalty" at a meeting to be held in New York city Thursday. He added that the "facts are the same as in the case of former Albany County Chairman Isidor Bookstein, who was listed as a member of the Liberal Committee and who, at my request, resigned his chairmanship although stating he was not aware of his membership in the Macy organization."

Bookstein promptly denied he had been requested to resign by Eaton and prepared to fight any move to oust him from the State Committee at Thursday's meeting.

Miss Garing's counter to Gleason's thrust came in the form of a letter to all committeemen, claiming his charge marked him as "Old Guard No. 1," and "demonstrates to me your complete unfitness for the position you hold as secretary of the Republican State Committee, and at the meeting you refer to (Thursday) I will ask to have you removed because of your attempt to exercise powers that are not in accordance with the law."

Despite a statement by Eaton that he "expected no trouble at the meeting Thursday," political observers said a bitter battle is in the offing.

Local Amateurs Not Interfering on Radio

The wireless amateurs of Kingston are not interfering with the broadcast reception, according to the Colonial City Radio Club, which has received numerous complaints of code interference on the regular American broadcast band.

Of late there have been some complaints by broadcast listeners that they have been annoyed by code on the broadcast bands, that is, above 200 and under 500 meters.

Yesterday afternoon in particular, there were some fast code messages heard in the vicinity of 480 meters. These messages were intercepted by some of the local amateurs who noted their calls. It was code traffic between the Swedish ship Anten and another ship running under the banner of the Shepherd Line. There was also a U. S. Coast Guard cutter in communication with both of these ships. They passed Kingston about 3:50 and their calls were distinctly heard until after 6.

On November 14, last, at the National Convention of Radio Manufacturers held at Rochester, Chief Engineer of the Federal Radio Commission C. E. Joffile stated that interference with broadcast reception almost never comes from amateurs these days, and that if an amateur is heard, it can almost always be attributed to a faulty broadcast receiver.

Body of Dead Kidnaped WILLIAM WEISS RECOVERED

Philadelphia, Jan. 2 (AP).—The body of William Weiss, kidnaped and slain night life character, was recovered today from Neshaunty creek, just northeast of Philadelphia.

The body of the reputed victim of Robert Malt's notorious "tri-state gang" was found near the spot to which authorities were directed by a member of the band yesterday.

The discovery ends a three-month hunt for the reputed wealthy man who was "snatched" by three men as he drove up to his suburban home one evening last October.

Harbor policemen, strapping from two boats in the stream, brought the body to the surface with ropes. Wrapped in blankets and weighted down with iron, the grim bundle was discovered under a bridge, and two days of grappling work ended by fog and floating ice cakes in the stream.

Authorities had been directed to the spot by Martin Garrett, a member of the gang, shortly after he was captured last week with several other members of the mob. Included in the reported leaders, Robert Malt, convicted killer, and Walter Legenza.

Quick Adoption of Huge Public Works Measure Predicted by Speaker

Speaker Byrns Says $4,880,000,000 Bill Will Pass Senate—Reports Success to White House—Caucus of Democrats.

LIBERAL DEBATE

But Will Allow Only Amendments to be Offered from the Appropriations Committee.

Washington, Jan. 22 (AP).—Quick adoption by the house of the $4,880,000,000 public works bill with authority for the President to administer the funds was predicted today by Speaker Byrns after a White House conference.

The speaker and Chairman Buchanan of the house appropriations committee reported to the President there was every prospect the administration measure would go through without change.

A caucus of house Democrats was called for four p. m. (eastern time) today to consider the bill and Speaker Byrns announced the measure would be taken up tomorrow.

He added that whether any attempt would be made to bind the Democrats would depend entirely on what occurred in the caucus, but he had no suggestion for such action.

"We want liberal debate and the rule provides this," Byrns said. "We will only allow amendments to be offered from the appropriations committee."

The two house leaders said they called at the White House merely to report to the President.

Their confident prediction of quick passage indicated a determination by the administration to check any revolt against the recovery program such as threatened in the rules committee over the so-called "gag rule" for consideration of this first of the major measures this session.

Liberal 'Gag' Rule

With its Democratic revolvers partially appeased, the House Rules Committee today voted a liberalized "gag" rule for House consideration of the $4,880,000,000 relief program.

The action was taken without a record vote as President Roosevelt conferred with Speaker Byrns and Chairman Buchanan of the House Appropriations Committee and after Democratic leaders had called a party caucus for 4 p. m. (eastern time) today to bind the majority to support the measure.

The insurgents gained some concessions. Debate on the rule was fixed at one hour while three hours of debate were granted on the bill itself.

In addition, a motion to send the measure back to committee was assured and other amendments are to be offered by the appropriations committee.

The revolvers demanded changes in the bill affecting classification of public works projects to be undertaken.

The measure will be brought up in the House tomorrow.

Shorter Session at Albany.

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 22 (AP).—The present legislative session is expected to be shortened by at least 20 days under a new set of rules adopted unanimously by the Assembly. Auto Stolen By Karpis And Campbell Found With Motor Running Car Abandoned but Agents Unable To Explain Why Motor Was Not Shut Off—Find Made Near Monroe, Mich.

AGENTS CONCENTRATE

Two Wanted in Connection With Bremer Kidnaping and Other Crimes, Believed Near Detroit.

Detroit, Jan. 22 (AP).—State police revealed this morning that the automobile that Alvin Karpis and his companion, Harry Campbell, took from an Allentown, Pa., physician yesterday had been found abandoned near Monroe, Mich. The motor of the car still was running. Why it was abandoned had not been determined.

The car apparently had been headed toward Detroit when its occupants left it and the search for Karpis and Campbell, last members at large of the notorious Karpis-Barker gang, accused of the Bremer kidnaping and other crimes, was concentrated here and in the territory between here and Monroe.

The car was taken over two men who, police are confident, were Karpis and Campbell, abducted him near Quakertown, Pa., and forced him to drive them into Ohio. Dr. Hunsicker was tied and left behind near Wadsworth, O., last night while the fugitives drove on.

Philadelphia, Jan. 22 (AP).—The kidnaping of a Philadelphia physician gave a new clue today to the trail of Alvin Karpis, America's public enemy number one, and his companion, Harry Campbell.

The trail seemed to lead west, just as federal and state police, with orders to "shoot to kill," hoped again that they had "bottled up" Karpis and Campbell in the wild Haycock Mountain region, near Quakertown, forty miles north of Philadelphia.

The two desperadoes shot their way out of an Atlantic City hotel Sunday leaving two "girl friends" who are being held.

Doctor Abducted

The latest clue came shortly before midnight when word was received from Wadsworth, Ohio, that Dr. H. H. Hunsicker, son of a Philadelphia state senator, had been abducted in his automobile near Quakertown.

It was in that wooded, hilly region that the bullet-punctured car in which Karpis and Campbell escaped was found in a lane leading to a farmhouse.

Tired aces of the department of justice had been rushed to Doylestown, near Quakertown, as the new clue came. There seemed little doubt that their quarry had again escaped. The description of the men furnished by the kidnaped physician tallied with the men.

Dr. Hunsicker said he was on his way from his Philadelphia home to the state hospital, at Allentown, about midnight when another car drove alongside his machine, halting him.

"A man got out with a machine gun and ordered me to open the door. He rode with me and I followed the other car for about three miles. On a side road they abandoned their car."

"After that they did all the driving in my car."

Trussed Up.

Near Wadsworth, the physician said, he was trussed up with his belt and left in a vacant hall, while the men went west in his automobile. Sheriff Ray Krugel said he had little doubt they were Karpis and Campbell.

Hampered by the fog, that shrouded the hills and valleys, the federal men said they would probably have to wait for hours to pick up the trail.

The bullet-ridden car in which the two men fled from Atlantic City was found yesterday. The farmer who discovered it in his lane said he first noticed it about midnight Sunday.

Karpis is the last free member of the Karpis-Barker gang accused of the $200,000 Bremer kidnaping. Karpis was hiding in Florida but fled north after Kate (Ma) Barker and her son, Fred Barker, were slain by federal agents in another part of the state.

Cold Wave Leaves Fifty Dead, Danger Spreads

(By The Associated Press)

The cold wave spread east and south today, leaving behind about 50 dead.

Floods, fog, steel, rains and low temperatures combined to delay traffic and endanger lives, as the frigid blast from the north dipped down into Dixie, threatening to bring freezing weather as far south as Central Florida by tonight.

Floods were reported in Arkansas, Louisiana, Mississippi and Tennessee, and the Willamette river in Wisconsin had broken through the St. Croix dam, damaging a power house.

Temperatures in the far northwest, the Rocky Mountain area, and the west central states, where the mercury had sunk as low as 32 below in Minnesota, were moderating. They were followed by warm rains along the Pacific northwest, bringing a new menace to lives and property as the heavy snows began to change into raging floods.

Snow In New Orleans

New Orleans, Jan. 22 (AP).—Residents of New Orleans awoke today in freezing weather with a surprise at finding themselves caught in a snowstorm—the first snow many children of the present generation had ever seen. At 8 o'clock this morning it was still falling.

Roofs were covered with snow throughout the city and the snow bunched an inch deep in the gutters of the roofs and on tops of automobiles. There was snow aplenty for snowballs by the time the youngsters awoke in this balmy New Orleans of two days ago when the temperature soared up to 89 degrees.

French Forces Massed On Somaliland Front To Subdue Tribesmen

Paris, Jan. 22 (AP).—French forces including camel troops and airplanes were ordered to the southwest frontier of French Somaliland today to put down tribal war which already has cost the lives of 37 members of the French Colonial administration.

The French action followed a battle January 18, just reported to the French capital, in which M. Bernard, French chief of the Gobad region, 16 native soldiers, and 80 natives were slain in the Lake Abbe region.

Bernard and his men had gone to investigate a battle reported raging between the rival Assai Imaras and the Iasas tribes of Nomads in that region.

French authorities described it as "a purely local fight between tribes" not involving the Ethiopians, on whose border the action took place. The Ethiopian government, however, will be asked to help pursue and capture the battling tribesmen.

Bernard was touring his territory with native militia. He went immediately to the battleground. The natives overwhelmed his men, however, and a massacre ensued.

Governor-General Copet of French Somaliland ordered airplanes, a company of Senegalese sharpshooters, and a troop of the camel corps to leave Djibouti at once to round up tribesmen.

France has been trying to pacify the region for the last two years. In 1932 French airplanes flew to Lake Abbe when the Assai Imaras attacked the Iasas Nomads.

French officials, describing the massacre as "an unfortunate occurrence," said the tribesmen had "solved Ethiopia of any responsibility."

The Assai Imaras were described as violent raving outlaw bands which frequently attacked French, and Ethiopian outposts and recognized no sovereignty.

Their armaments are 1874 model rifles supplemented with short, sharp daggers. They fight to the last of their men.

Mysterious Woman May Be T. H. Robinson

Houston, Texas, Jan. 22 (AP).—Federal agents looked for a "woman in a long, dark coat" today in the belief that the woman might be another of their listed banking fugitives—Thomas H. Robinson, Jr., accused kidnaper.

Police expressed belief the 24-year-old Robinson, charged with the $50,000 abduction of Mrs. Allen (Lola) Louisville, Ky., society matron, was the mysterious "woman" who eluded them after alighting from a motor car in a garage yesterday. Robinson has been reported frequently in a woman's masquerade.

Sourland Logger and Man Named Rositter Saw Prisoner; Whited Twice in February at Very Close Range.

CAST AND RECORD

Defense Reveals Cast Made of Footprint, Record of Condon Imitation of "John's" Voice.

By WILLIAM A. KINNEY

(Copyright, 1935, by Associated Press)

Flemington, N. J., Jan. 22 (AP).—Two more residents of the Sourland country surrounding the home of Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh today identified Bruno Richard Hauptmann as a man lurking in that vicinity before the kidnaping and murder of the aviator's infant son.

Charles Rositter, of Maplewood, testified today that he saw Bruno Richard Hauptmann in the vicinity of Hopewell the Saturday before the kidnaping.

Millard Whited, a logger of the Sourland country surrounding the Lindbergh estate, testified he saw Hauptmann in the vicinity on the 18th of February, 1932, and again between the 25th and 27th of February, the same year.

The Lindbergh baby was stolen on March 1, 1932.

Before Whited's identification, the state succeeded finally in its fight to get the kidnap ladder into evidence, and the defense brought out the fact that a plaster cast had been made of a footprint which it claimed would show Hauptmann was not the man who collected the $50,000 Lindbergh ransom in St. Raymond's cemetery, The Bronx, on April 2, 1932.

Edward J. Reilly, chief of the defense staff, said he hoped to get the plaster cast into court for comparison with Hauptmann's foot, and hoped as well to play a phonograph record which a witness said Dr. John F. "Jasie" Condon made of his conversation with the man to whom he paid the ransom. A department of Justice agent, Thomas H. Sisk, said both were in Washington.

Whited testified he "knew every person of the vicinity around his farm, which was separated from the Lindbergh estate by a ten-foot strip. "Did you see any strangers?" the attorney general asked him.

"Yes."

"Did you see Bruno Richard Hauptmann?"

"I did."

Relating the first time he saw the man he said was Hauptmann, Whited said:

"I was coming home for dinner with my car and he came out nearly on my ground or, I would say, within two or three feet, one way or the other—I could show you the very spot if I were there—and he stepped out to the side of the road when I came face to him, with the car, and I saw him when I was coming to him, and when I passed, through my window, I looked at it and wondered why and where he came from."

The second time:

"He was on the cross road that leads to Zion and I was coming up the road with the truck and trailer, and I saw him on the cross roads standing."

Whited said he saw his face both times, being the first time only 8 feet from him, and the second time only 6 feet. He asserted he was positive in his identification, that there could be no mistake.

Whited said he was undergoing a rigorous cross-examination when luncheon recess was declared. The defense sought to show his identification was faulty, that he had personal motive for publicity, and that he first reported seeing the stranger near the Lindbergh home in order to avert suspicion from himself. He said fast

Cat Show Will Be Held Here Feb. 2

The Hudson Valley Cat Club will hold another cat show at the Governor Clinton Hotel on Saturday, February 2. In addition to the all breed show a tabby specialty show is being held for red tabbies, silver tabbies and tortoiseshells, both long and short hair.

Mrs. Helen M. Horne of Cannonville, Conn., who ably judged last year's all breed show will judge the tabby specialty show. Mrs. F. Y. Mathis of Greenwich, Conn., who besides being an authority on cats is one of the best known and most popular judges in the dog fancy. Mrs. Mathis is also president of the United Cat Clubs of America the governing body of the cat fancy which makes and enforces the show rules, standards of the breeds, rules for registration of cats and licenses the judges. Classes are provided for both sexes of each color and breed. Winners of first place in each class compete for best of that color and then the finals. Champions do not compete in the classes with the non-champions. Ribbons are given to the winners of first, second and third in each class and winners ribbons to the best male and best female of each color.

There is a large list of trophies and cash prizes offered. An unusually large number of premiums are offered for the domestic short hairs known to many only as "alley cats." This graceful breed is rapidly coming up in popularity. Few people realize that it differs from the Persian only in length of coat and aside from this difference the standard for both breeds is the same. Many a household keeps a pet short hair cat that would do a great deal of winning in the shows were it shown. There is a special cash prize of $2 offered for the best domestic short hair owned and shown by a local girl or boy not over 14 years old.

A list of local exhibitors and their entries will be announced later. Competition is open to all. Anyone wishing information in regard to making entries may phone 348-J-1 or write the Show Manager, Miss Elizabeth B. Browning, West Hurley, N. Y., before Friday, January 25.

Debate in 4 Sections Over War Troubles

Washington, Jan. 22 (AP).—Four separate quarters of the capital resounded today with debate over war, its consequences and ways of preventing it.

Banking 100 Years Ago

One hundred years ago there was a perfect mania for banking in the country, riots often occurring when stock in a new bank was offered. To open a bank was the panacea for almost every ill. Men would associate themselves together when badly in debt and open up a bank to relieve themselves of indebtedness. When a fire occurred of any great proportion, a bank was created to relieve the sufferers.

Cancer Neglected

In the eighteenth century cancer was ignorantly regarded as contagious and sufferers from the disease were subjected to needless neglect and cruelty.

TEMPERANCE EDUCATION DAY OBSERVED BY W. C. T. U.

Temperance Education Day, January 16, was observed by the W. C. T. U. of Kingston at a meeting held in St. James Methodist Episcopal Church parlors last Thursday afternoon.

Although the day was stormy the attendance was good and much interest was shown. The meeting was called to order by the president, Mrs. George W. Shultz.

Mrs. Thomas Edmonston had charge of the devotion. The membership campaign was discussed and plans made for the work which will begin February 17 and continue through March, April and May.

The W. C. T. U. invites all who are interested in the work to unite with them during this campaign. Plans were also discussed for the regional conference to be held in Kingston some time in March. This conference will include delegates and friends from Greene, Columbia, Dutchess, Putnam, Delaware and Ulster counties.

After the business session closed a program of special interest followed. Two papers on "Our Country's Need" were presented. The first, on "Alcohol Legislation for the Traffic," was given by Miss Margaret Treadwell. In this paper Mrs. Ida B. Wise Smith's quotation was given: "Back of the liquor traffic is the financial profit. There can be no profits if there are no drinkers. Therefore the traffic organizes, presses the sale and seeks to make drinkers. The Woman's Christian Temperance Union calls for the education of the individual and society in regard to what alcohol is and what it does. It calls for the elimination of beverage alcohol by the abolition of the liquor traffic."

The second paper, on "Alcohol Education for the Individual," was given by Mrs. Sophia M. Gillett. Mrs. Eric Prendergast, state superintendent of the peace department, is sending to all local unions an urgent appeal for every member to write to our U. S. senators, Royal S. Copeland and Robert F. Wagner, Senate Office, Washington, D. C., to use their influence for the World Court Resolution as necessary to world disarmament; also to write to President Roosevelt thanking him for his interest in this important measure.

Pine Bush School Reporter Catches Ex-Teacher in Fraudulent Account

Miss Ann Davis, student and school reporter at Pine Bush, contributed the following ironic account of the visit of a former teacher:

"Mrs. Helen Turner, our former teacher, visited our school last week. 'It seems that it takes a teacher to be a good pupil,' Mrs. Turner boasted on well that and a sound was heard from her seat. We found out the reason, however.

"When Miss Brewster asked Mrs. Turner a question, she replied, 'I am sorry, but I was solving a puzzle and I didn't hear what was said.'"

FLASHES OF LIFE SKETCHED IN BRIEF

By Associated Press

Death of a Miser

New York—For 23 years Nestor Fernlein ate his meals at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel, but lived in a room on the bowery at $1.75 a week.

He was a silver polisher at the Ritz and ate in the hotel kitchen. Then he'd go home to the Bowery where no one paid much attention to him.

He was found dead yesterday in his room at the age of 84. Police found he had savings of $8,600.

He left no known relatives and unless one appears unexpectedly he will be buried in Potter's Field and his savings will be taken over by the state.

Costly

Milwaukee—The menu listed hamburgers at a nickel, but Emil Decker, a bellboy, paid $10 for one.

When Nolan Rash, attendant at a stand, asked Decker to pay, the bellhop raised such a howl that police were called to quiet him.

At the station, Decker readily jerked $35 bail from his wallet and later was fined $10 and costs on disorderly conduct charges.

USE MOTOR TAXES to save lives, money and time

Sound programs for badly needed highway construction are being wrecked by diversion of highway funds to other purposes.

Smooth, wide roads, arterial streets, safe curves, grade separations, modern bridges, save millions of dollars annually to motorists and prevent accidents. It is for these benefits that motorists pay gasoline taxes and license fees.

Tell your Legislators to give work instead of dollars by stopping diversion. Save millions for motorists in gas, oil, tires and car repairs.

Father and Son Night Program February 8

The largest Father and Son Night program ever presented here in Kingston is nearing completion by the Federated Men's Clubs of Kingston and vicinity and by the night set for it, Friday, February 8, the stage will be all set to witness a gathering of fathers and sons, fathers and adopted sons or boys and adopted fathers, at the Municipal Auditorium.

This promotion is under the Civic Betterment part of the Federated Men's Clubs and the 26 church men's clubs now affiliated with the Federation have cooperated to the fullest extent in all the activities sponsored by the Federation. Well over 1,500 men are represented in this organization and are interested in the welfare of the youth of Kingston and its vicinity. The Father and Son program is nation-wide in its scope—each year a week is set aside for promotion of such interest in the "boy" and his problems. For several years here in Kingston the Y. M. C. A. has sponsored this activity, there being no other organization equipped to carry on such a program, but with the firm support of all the churches in the Federation its success is a certainty, it is said.

The purpose of the Kingston Father and Son Night is to promote a comradeship and a recognition of the bonds between man and boy in the social, civic and religious program of the community. The whole program at the city owned Municipal Auditorium on Father and Son Night will be wide open to every man and boy in Kingston and vicinity—the only admission needed is for a boy to come accompanied by his father or a man accompanied by a boy. The auditorium is expected to be seated to its full capacity on this big night.

At a meeting of the committee last night a partial outline of the evening's entertainment shows that a wonderful treat is in store for both the young and "old" boys. Arrangements are being made to bring the finest entertainers and program here for the occasion. A popular radio feature is expected; a speaker who is one of the greatest favorites among both old and young has been urged to be there; one of the large Airway Transport Companies is being interviewed with the intent to procure one of their programs which present a thrilling two-way conversation between plane and stage; a large orchestra; a local popular comedy couple; one of the most prominent fathers and one of the most popular sons will bring their greetings; not to forget the very able master of ceremonies together with a big community singing feature and other items that will be mentioned later.

Americans who went to the Saar to vote, because they had a technical right to do so, are said to be homesick for the good old U. S. A. Serves 'em right. Still it's probably worth the trip to find out what they've found out.

The city trash men are busier than usual this week. They are collecting the broken New Year resolutions out of the ash cans.

Testimonial for Edgar E. Schryver

A record crowd is expected at the testimonial get-together dinner to be tendered Edgar E. Schryver in recognition of his 52 years of faithful service as secretary of Excelsior Hose Co.

Final arrangements were completed Monday night for the dinner, which will be held at the King Crown, 440 Washington avenue, Thursday evening, January 24, at 7 o'clock. Because of the demand for tickets one of the partitions will be removed from the dining hall.

Foreman William B. Martin of Excelsior Hose wishes to have it understood that the dinner is not for the members of Four Hose exclusively, but that everybody is invited. There will also be an innovation in that ladies also will be welcomed. It is expected that practically all the prominent officials of the city will attend and also the heads of the State and the Hudson Valley Volunteer Firemen's Associations.

Music for the dinner and for dancing afterward will be furnished by the Catskill Mountaineers.

Those wishing to make reservations may do so until noon Wednesday by calling Willis Roe, 211, or William B. Martin, 1119.

Judgment in replevin and damages to the amount of $200.

Judge Traver took notice of the fact that during the present term of county court some ten or a dozen cases, including such charges as robbery, abduction and murder in the second degree, had been settled on pleas of guilty, without trial. The judge said that during the term man after man had walked up and pleaded guilty, without a trial, and the district attorney's office was congratulated and commended on carrying out the criminal work of the county so efficiently and yet cheaply and expeditiously.

Thanks the Jurors.
In discharging the jurors from further attendance at this term of court, Judge Traver thanked them for their faithfulness and asked them not to feel that they had been of no service. He said that the very fact that they were there and ready to try cases and that witnesses had been on hand had been of service, that pleas of guilty had been entered because those concerned knew that every precaution had been made for their trial, should they decline to plead.

Court was adjourned to Monday, January 28, at 2 p. m.

MANNERCHOR BALL TO BE HELD JANUARY 28

Purple Shells Once Costly
In the days of trade with the Indians, when wampum was used as money, the purple shells were about twice as valuable as the white.

Clarinet Is Most Useful of Instruments in Band

The clarinet, like other members of the wood-wind family, goes back to those instruments used by man when symphonies and fauns danced to the music of pipes in the woods. Since those early woodland days, says an authority in the Washington Post, the pipe has undergone many changes. The mouthpiece was given a double reed for the oboe, the English horn and the bassoon, but in the clarinet only a single reed is used. Much as the clarinet resembles the oboe, it does not taper, and is of equal thickness until the end, where it flares into a bell. Of all the wood-wind instruments, the clarinet is the most useful because of its wide range, its ease of playing and the great variety of tone.

Clarinetes are made in different keys and pitches. The ones in B flat and A are most commonly in use, although some of the scores call for clarinet in C, E flat and D. Occasionally an alto clarinet is employed, and, more frequently, a bass clarinet, which is the largest and deepest pitched instrument of this family. It has a crook for the mouthpiece, and a large bell. It sounds an octave below the B flat clarinet.

The clarinet was the last instrument to enter the classical orchestra. Mozart was the first composer to bring out its chief possibilities.

Big Bertha's Long Range Outclassed Other Guns

Typical artillery of the World war, writes John A. Menaugh, in the Chicago Tribune, were the following British guns: The 14-inch gun, with a range of 20 miles; the 12-inch gun, with a range of 19 miles; the 9.2-inch gun, firing a shell 15 miles; the 6-inch gun, with a range of 10 miles; the 12-inch howitzer, hurling a shell 8 miles; the 60-pounder rifle, with a range of more than 7 miles; the 9.2-inch howitzer, shooting 7 miles; the 18-pounder field piece, with a range of about 9,400 yards; the 4.5-inch howitzer, with a range of 7,000 yards; and the 8.7-inch howitzer, shooting 5,800 yards.

The maximum range of the huge German 42-centimeter howitzers that were used against the forts at Antwerp was 10,300 yards. The German 8.9-inch trench mortar threw a shell 1,250 yards. The German Minenwerfer was capable of throwing a 50-pound trench bomb 450 yards.

It was the German long-range gun, the Big Bertha, however, that was the most talked-of weapon of the World war. A number of guns of this type were employed in shelling Paris.

Others of the guns had different maximum ranges, the greatest only slightly less than 80 miles.

The Stem-Winding Watch

The earliest mention of a keyless or self-winding watch is in Schwenter's "Deutsche Mathematica et Physica," published at Nuremberg in 1651. Britten quotes an advertisement in the London-Gazette of 1686 concerning a watch having a spring wound up without a key. In 1750 Caron (later Beaumarchais) made a watch in a ring for Mme. de Pompadour which was wound by means of a lever projecting from the case under the dial. The keyless work of turning the pendant is generally attributed to A. L. Breguet, but it was probably Louis Clement Francois Breguet, who retired from the House of Breguet et Fils in 1833. Two forms, the rocking-bar mechanism and the shifting sleeve mechanism, came into use about 1848.

Sneezing

In every age in every country, men have attached some kind of mysterious significance to sneezing. Early Christians crossed themselves. Medieval Europe went back to bed for hours if it sneezed while arising. Today, writes Ray Mollenhauer, Danville, Ill., in Collier's Weekly, sneezing is a sign of truthfulness in Turkestan, an indication of wisdom in some parts of Scotland and a bad omen throughout a large part of the world which still exclaims "God bless you" or its equivalent when one sneezes—for fear his soul will leave his body.

Microbes Live Long

Microbes undoubtedly present the greatest extremes in nature. They vary greatly in size, some being 5,000 times larger than others. They live in a temperature range of 77 degrees, some being able to live at 450 degrees F. below zero while others thrive at 320 degrees F. above it. And some apparently are deathless, writes Freling Foster, in Collier's Weekly, as they have been found in a revivable condition in coal deposits 100,000,000 years old.

Worship Goddesses

Hindus, which has 200,000,000 followers, or one-eighth of the world's entire population, is the only living religion which worships goddesses as well as gods. In fact, writes D. B. Mordell, in Collier's Weekly, they probably far outnumber the gods, as more than 90 per cent of the people in southern India worship local village deities, nearly all of which are female.

"Burned-Out" Eyes

The destructive result of eyestrain is explained on the grounds that six of the twelve sets of nerves in the head lead to the eyes. Overwork of these delicate nerves not only saps the energy available for other nerves, but "burns out" the optical nerves and renders ineffective the eyes, one of the principal channels of knowledge.

Ground for R. of C. Party.

PHILADELPHIA ONCE FAVORED LOTTERIES

Churches Used Public Gambling to Raise Funds.

Philadelphia—Lotteries now under ban by federal law once flourished in Philadelphia, "cradle of American liberty."

Dating as far back as 1733, churches used "public gambling" as a means to raise money for a new steeple, clock tower or whatever was needed.

Probably the first sanctioned public lottery was the one inaugurated by Benjamin Franklin and his friends to build an "Association Battery" as protection against feared attacks during the early British-French clashes. Tickets were sold for 40 shillings each.

Popularity of the "gambling" became so great that by 1700 lotteries were being held in all sections throughout the Philadelphia area.

At the outbreak of the Revolutionary war the thirteen states, sorely in need of money to finance their armies and fight for independence, sanctioned lotteries, and congress authorized printing of 100,000 tickets.

Some of the more important lotteries before and during the Revolution were: For 3,000 pieces of eight to finish St. Paul's Episcopal church; to raise 500 pounds to finish Trinity church, Oxford; to raise 6,000 pounds for the New Jersey college, which later became Princeton university; and to raise 3,000 pounds to build a lighthouse at Cape Henlopen and improve navigation in the Delaware.

Many of the early roads and streets in Philadelphia were paved with money from sanctioned lotteries. The state legislature to prevent increase of taxes authorized a lottery in 1791 to raise $30,000 for construction of the Philadelphia and Lancaster turnpike, now the National highway.

Nowadays, "number" racketeers have taken over the "business" here. Philadelphia is one of their greatest centers.

Claim Grade Crossings Slow Up Fast Trains

New York—The rejuvenation of the railroads through the use of high-speed streamlined trains is being blocked by 240,000 obstacles—the approximate number of grade crossings in the United States, V. G. Iden of the American Institute of Steel Construction, states.

With only 30,000 of these grade crossings protected, trains cannot be run at anything like the recent record speed of the Union Pacific flyer, which was made possible by employing thousands of extra watchmen, Iden asserted.

The solution lies in a broad program of grade-crossing elimination, which could be carried out for $2,400,000,000 through the use of steel overpasses, he said. Such work would provide employment for 750,000 men directly engaged in the work for a year and would bring about the re-employment of many thousands more in farms, mills and factories throughout the country. Improved transportation would operate in the farmer's behalf, it was claimed.

Male Students' Expenses Increase in Junior Year

Oxford, Ohio.—Expenses of college men here were found to increase in their junior year, with larger outlays for entertainment of "dates," for doctors and for dental work, in a survey of student expenditures made at Miami university.

The purchasing power of 2,400 students is approximately $2,000,000, it was found, with a third of the amount going to the university for fees and tuition. Most of the remainder, the survey showed, is spent in Oxford, with Cincinnati, Dayton and Hamilton, Ohio, getting a share of the remainder. Men spend more for board and entertainment than women, it was found, and women more for clothing. The actual cost of attending Miami for one year is $307.25 for men and $389 for women, exclusive of travel, clothing and entertainment, according to the survey.

Thief Sends Owner Check for Stock He Had Stolen

Salem, Ohio.—Jefferson Schaw, sixty, has a new faith in human honesty. An unidentified thief recently broke into his home and stole two stock certificates, each for 100 shares of stock. Just one week later Schaw received a letter from the unidentified thief, who, it developed, had a conscience. With the letter was a check for $2,100. The note told Schaw that the writer had sold the stock to an Akron broker-ager firm. But the thief apparently had succumbed finally to his conscience and had sent the check to the owner.

Sun Spots Promise Era of Prosperity

San Jose, Calif.—Eleven years of redoubled shining on the part of the sun, bringing animal and vegetable fertility and general prosperity to the world, were forecast by Dr. Albert J. Newell, director of the Lick Memorial Observatory at the University of Santa Clara.

Sun spots, Dr. Newell said, indicated the increased solar activity. His observations were borne out by the opinion of Dr. Charles Caldwell, vice chairman of the advisory committee of the American Museum of New York.

The baby to receive the prize offered by Edward Ackley as the first baby to be born in the new year was Rose Endora Miller, born on the evening of January 13, to Mr. and Mrs. Walter Joseph Miller on the river road. The prize of $5 is placed in the bank to the baby's credit. This makes the seventh prize offered by Mr. Ackley. Beginning in 1929 Patricia Ruth Morris, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Morris was the first baby of the year. In 1930, twins came to Mr. and Mrs. Harry McCarty, Elizabeth and William. The girl later died and her sum was placed to the credit of William. William Gordon Kurtz, son of Mr. and Mrs. Hobart Kurtz, received the 1931 prize money. KINGSTON, N. Y., JAN. 22, 1935.

SURREALISM.

The newest thing in art is known as "surrealism." This term seems to mean super-realism. A surrealist picture must be more real than reality itself. Salvador Dali, a young Spanish painter, has come to America to tell us about it, but when asked what his pictures mean, he confesses that he doesn't know. The pictures, then, have to speak for themselves.

One painting, a portrait, shows an old gentleman writing on a piece of paper. It is a good enough portrait. But in one corner is what an eye-witness describes as "a high jury box with dim faces peering from it, and several vague gorgons and gargoyles floating in the air and sticking out their tongues at the old gentleman." Another, called "The Persistence of Memory," represents a watch hanging from a leafless tree, with a queer, long-nosed figure in the background and two other watches floating dimly in the air.

People are baffled by these pictures. Anybody, though, can venture a guess at what they mean. The first picture might be a man's conscience troubling him about something. The second may be a new version of that brilliant Alice in Wonderland—the Cheshire Cat vanishing and leaving her grin behind. Maybe Art should be like that, the material part of it fading away and leaving nothing but the Pure Idea. Anyone with Plato's philosophy of an ideal world, which the real world imperfectly represents, would like that. But some how Pure Ideas are awfully hard to grab and hang onto. The more you try to concentrate on them, the more they fade into thin air, and you just go to sleep.

THE TWO BUDGETS.

This purpose at least is achieved by the President's double budget, with its "regular expenditures" in one and its "emergency expenditures" in the other. It makes clear the nature of the emergency, how it is being handled, and how the budget might be balanced. Both of the new budgets are a little shadowy around the edges, but apparently they run about even. That is to say, expenditures for normal operation of the government will be about equal to relief expenditures. If the President spends what he proposes, to take care of the unemployed. Thus the normal government budget would be balanced if the government were not in the relief business.

The problem, therefore, is somewhat simplified. The President says, with the evident approval of the country, that the government will turn back to the states, for support, those on relief who are unemployable. The rest—the idle workers able to work—it will employ on a non-competitive basis in public works until private enterprise absorbs them. It is hard to agree on anything else that would be decent and reasonable.

As rapidly, then, as private enterprise can provide jobs for these unemployed, the government will gladly let them go. If or when all of them are re-employed privately, the national debt will stop rising. Here is an obvious challenge to business men who have been demanding a balanced budget. Huzzed individuals themselves may help balance the budget.

A WOMAN GOES FISHING.

Mrs. Oliver Cromwell Grinnell, sole owner of the Grinnell Lithographic Company of New York City, is quitting. She has been on the job since 1904 when she and her husband established the business. He died in 1920. All her life there have been things Mrs. Grinnell wanted to do, but she always postponed them until she should "have more time." She never thought of stepping out until just recently. The idea developed quickly. She decided to turn the business over to her employees, some of whom have been with the company 20 years or more. She is satisfied they will run the concern as well as she can.

And what is this woman going to do when she retires? It may surprise some folks. She is going fishing. She will go to Miami first, "for a good long rest." Then she'll start fishing in April and will follow the season along from Florida to Long Island. "Then, in the Fall," she says, "I plan to make a trip to Peru. I hear they've been making some fine swordfish catches down there." Eventually she expects to go around the world, not on a quick tour, but taking her time to it and fishing as she goes. "In other words," says this wise woman, "I'm going to travel, and I'm going to fish, and I'm going to do just as I darn please."

Probably not many women, retiring from active business, would take up fishing in a big way, but they would do well to follow this woman's example to the extent of having a great enthusiasm and indulging it zestfully while they may.

MUST REDUCE FOOD

"The treatment of overweight, even the kind of overweight due simply to overeating, is beset with difficulties. Every diet that is sufficiently rigid to produce permanent results tends to give rise to a considerable loss of strength. Besides this, consistency must be given to the persistency with which treatment is kept up. However willing and energetic the patient may be, there is always the temptation to transgress and satisfy the cravings of hunger. This applies also to the cutting down on fluids, for if the patient has to contend with thirst he will soon weary of the treatment."

I believe the above statement by Dr. F. Popper, Vienna, describes what happens when the average overweight individual tries to reduce weight. He can get along fairly well cutting down on foods but he wants to drink a great amount of water, and to make matters worse he usually wants plenty of salt on his food.

Dr. Hopper advises a well regulated diet, poor in fats—cream, butter, fat meats, egg yolks—and poor also in carbohydrates—sugar, bread, potatoes, pastry, in all cases of overweight.

As you know, about five or even more in every hundred cases of overweight are due to the thyroid gland in the neck not making enough thyroid juice. It is this juice which makes all the body processes work fast and so burn up any extra food which, if not used, will be stored in the body as fat.

Many fat individuals who are not the thyroid type, use the thyroid extract to rid themselves of their overweight, often with serious results to their health.

Even in the thyroid type of overweight, when thyroid extract is being used, the fat and starch foods, and also liquids must still be cut down in order to get rid of the extra weight.

The thought then is that there is no royal or easy road to reducing weight. In all cases the food and liquids must be cut down.

However the reducing process should not be hurried but take in months the time the increase in weight has taken in years.

The Montana Kid

A RAPID-FIRE ROMANCE BY EVAN EVANS

SYNOPSIS: The Montana Kid has deserted his lawless life, and is in order to accept a challenge to fight Jack Lascar to the death. Lascar is a Mexican, and his life is a story of lawlessness. He is a Mexican, and his life is a story of lawlessness. He is a Mexican, and his life is a story of lawlessness.

Chapter 10

MONTANA CONSENTS

THIN, screaming voices came wafting through the air above the tumult of the landslide.

Brother Pascual was already hurrying down to the trail, where he remounted his mule and jogged on after the other two, while behind him the boulders still skipped and danced, hurtling down the trail with force that chewed great portions out of the lip of the rock; the overflow made a cataract of thunder into the bottom of the ravine and set the echoes rolling.

The whole slope above seemed to be in motion, a river of down-flooding stone, and even when it stopped rushing, how could the men of the town climb their horses over those vast blocks which now obstructed the way?

The delight of Rubriz was like that of a child. He laughed till the tears were rolling on his face.

"Where's the fool who denies the power of prayer?" he demanded. "There's Brother Pascual, as simple as a sheep, but he's sharpened his wits by arguing with the saints and gossiping with the angels till he's able to think of a trick like that. You and I can do a few little things, but it takes a man of God to move mountains, Montana!"

Here the friar came up with them and, in response to a few words from Rubriz, took the hand of Montana in

He held out his hand, saying "Good-by, Montana."

"Wait a minute," he said. "I get things mixed up, down there in Mexico. Duraya—let's see—it's in the loop of a river, eh?"

"The river runs almost all the way around it," agreed Rubriz. "The fort has big stone walls, like those of a castle in the old days."

"Just so!" "And down the hill from the fort there's a cave run by Miguel Santos—a man who looks like a jabalero. But he has a wooden leg that's pulled him down in the world."

"I know the man," agreed Rubriz. "What about him?" "Nothing about him. But there's a flash of a girl in that cave. She keeps a red rose in the black of her hair. The men look at her and forget how their tequila tastes. They drink it like water while she's around. Her name—her name is Rosita."

"There is such a girl," agreed Rubriz. Montana stood up, threw away his cigar. "Thank God for an eye which can remember. Mateo, I am riding to Duraya with you."

"No, my friend!" protested the Mexican. "There is danger for you, south of the river. The Rurales remember you. They would smell out your trail as if they were bloodhounds. They would be at your throat in a day."

"Mateo, I must go to Duraya. I must see that girl Rosita again. There was something about her that seemed to say, 'Come once more. I shall remember.' Besides, I want to see the mustache of General Estrada."

A Washington Daybook

By HERBERT PLUMMER

WASHINGTON—Perhaps nothing intrigues the minds of Washington politicians at the moment more than whom the President will select to administer the prospective new "work relief" authority.

The proposed $4,000,000,000 co-ordinated authority which has been charged "with the orderly liquidation of present relief activities and the substitution of a national chart for the giving of work" is beyond the comprehension of almost everyone around here.

That's more money than any single governmental agency ever has had at its disposal to spend in one year. The choice of the man to do the spending, therefore, is of the greatest concern.

The only inkling came from Secretary Lick of the interior department after the President made his proposal. Although declaring he had heard nothing about his being selected to head an enlarged "new deal" spending agency, he added:

"We handled the other one, didn't we?"

What Insiders Opine

THERE are those, however, professing to be on the inside of things who contend neither Lick nor Harry L. Hopkins, relief administrator, will get the presidential nod to take over this new and gigantic task if congress approves it.

Walker Mentioned

COSSIP has it in certain quarters that probably the best bet for the job of spending the $4,000,000,000 under the proposed new set-up is Frank C. Walker, the man upon whom President Roosevelt first called to coordinate the far-flung "new deal" recovery agencies.

Not a great deal was heard publicly of Walker when he served as director of the Executive Council, but he is known to have done important work behind the scenes. He moved around quietly, personally was self-effacing, and then suddenly disappeared from the Washington scene to return to his private business in New York.

It is argued that Walker would be just the type to take over the proposed "work relief" agency. The task of spending such a huge sum of money would be fraught with peril. Many believe the President desires the job be done with restraint, system and the least possible show.

There are those who say Mr. Walker fits these requirements.

From The Police Chief's Notebook

(Chief of Police J. Allan Wood Recalls Some of the Interesting Police Cases of the Past Twenty Years in Kingston, Which Are Jotted Down by H. L. Van Dusen.)

No. 2—Strictly Confidential.

"Is the chief in?" asked a stocky negro as he entered police headquarters in the city hall on a September morning in 1916.

"He is," replied the man on the desk.

"I would like to see him," continued the negro "for I have something strictly confidential I want to tell him," and he was ushered into the private office where Chief of Police J. Allan Wood sat at his desk cleaning up an accumulation of routine matters.

The entry of the negro into the chief's office that day marked the beginning of one of the queerest cases that had been brought to the police chief's attention in some years. From it developed the arrest of a man who, hard up for cash, insured a house in the country for as large an amount as possible, and then set fire to it to collect the insurance.

"That negro certainly had a strange tale to tell," said Chief Wood as he leaned back in his chair, "and one involving a man who was well known. The negro, we'll call him Verne, for that was not his name, told me he had just recently been released from prison. He said he had been mixed up in some dealings with this white man who we will call Mr. X, and that as a result Verne had served time while the white man escaped punishment."

"He came back to Kingston," said Verne "after serving my stretch, and first thing I knew I ran across Mr. X on the street and was glad to see me. He never said a word about me serving time, but acted as though nothing had happened, but boss you can believe it when I say I had not forgotten him. Well, this man said he had a proposition he wanted to make and that we could get a nice lot of money out of it with no danger at all."

"I was kinder suspicious of him," continued Verne. "For I remembered what had happened before, but I made up my mind if he had any thing crooked in mind I would lead him along and then turn him in to the police. He hadn't done anything to help me when I was pinched before and I made up my mind that if anybody was going to be pinched it would be he, not I."

"He asked me if I would meet him some place where we could talk things over quiet, and I agreed to meet him in the back room of a saloon downtown. Well he met and here is the proposition he made. He told me he was hard up and had to get ready cash. He said he had a building in Kingston that he wanted to have a match touched to so he could collect the insurance, but he wanted to wait until the fire department could not get to the fire quickly enough to put it out."

"This induced me," said the chief, "to take the matter up from a police angle."

way between the house and the barn. "Both men in the rig were too far away to recognize them, but I knew it was Verne and Mr. X for I had caught the new familiar twang of the negro's speech as he talked to the other man."

"The two alighted from the buckboard and the white man went around to the rear of the wagon and I could hear the jingle of tin cans. He had brought gasoline with him. Then I saw the white man, who was a tall heavy set man, weighing over 200 pounds, stride away toward the house while the negro remained behind in the wagon."

From where we were we could hear Mr. X fumbling with the lock and suddenly the door swung open and he stepped inside. A minute or so later we saw the reflection of what appeared to be Mr. X striking matches and the flashes were plainly visible as he walked from room to room.

It had been planned that while Mr. X was firing the house the negro would set fire to the barn.

"We saw the negro leave the wagon and walk up to the house. Later we learned that he had told Mr. X that he had been unable to set fire to the barn, and Mr. X replied gruffly that he would see to it himself as soon as he was finished with the house."

Then the pair suddenly emerged from the house and as they did so we could see the flames begin to shoot up inside the building.

Verne stayed in the wagon as Mr. X went into the barn and while he was in the barn some of our party armed with fire extinguishers rushed into the house in an attempt to put out the flames. The house, however, had evidently been well soaked with gasoline for their attempts proved futile.

While the others were busy in the house trying to put out the fire Shultis and I crawled up to the wagon.

Verne nearly let out a warning yell as he saw us suddenly appear on each side of the wagon, but in a low whisper I told him to shut up, it was us.

Just then Mr. X ran out of the barn toward the wagon. He did not see us as we were in the shadow. He carried two gasoline cans, one in each hand, and did not have a chance as Shultis and I leaped out of the shadows and grasped him firmly by the arms. He put up a struggle as he dropped the cans which fell with a crash to the ground, but I quickly snapped a pair of handcuffs on him and he stopped struggling.

While we were overpowering him others in the party who had fire extinguishers rushed into the barn and soon brought the fire under control. Our efforts to save the house, however, proved futile and for an hour our party stood around powerless to do anything to save the building from destruction. So sweeping was the fire that it is doubtful if even a fire department could have brought the fire under control, and the nearest fire department was miles away and the nearest telephone a similar distance.

"Well," said one of the party after we had been standing around for some time, "we can't do any good standing here, we might as well be starting back."

The suggestion was put into practice and with our handcuffed prisoner we drove back to Kingston and lodged him in the county jail.

Mr. X talked freely when he realized that we had him dead to rights. The same month his case was presented to the grand jury and he was indicted on a charge of arson. The following month, in October, he was arraigned in county court and entered a plea of guilty.

The late Judge James Jenkins sentenced him to a term of from 3½ to 10 years in prison.

Mr. X as he pleaded guilty in county court made a plea for mercy. He told the judge that he had no lawyer to represent him as he hadn't any money to hire one. "I've used up my money—what little I've had—to pay my debts," he said. "I'm here at your mercy," he continued.

He added, "If you know this case as well as I do I'm sure you'd be as lenient as you can. I am 57 years old and I've never been convicted before. This crime will ruin my reputation—it will ruin me forever in the way of making money, and for a man without reputation or money in this world it's a hard deal. I wouldn't have done it, but my mind seemed to be blank and I couldn't tell you just what I did. I saw those people when I came out, but I didn't recognize one of them, although I knew them all."

"As for Verne, Well I got even," he said. As for Mr. X, he served the time, and the last I heard of him he had shaken the dust of Kingston from his feet for other scenes and had become an evangelist, but I am not surprised at that for Verne had told me some time before that Mr. X was one of those men who prayed every day, and then forgot to live up to his prayers."

"I don't know as there is any particular moral in this case except that it again proves that crime not only doesn't pay, but never to try and frame another crime with one who thinks you have already wronged him."

"The next yarn in this series is entitled 'The Negro Who Vanished'."

The Shakespeare Library of Birmingham, England, reports that Shakespeare is read in 22 different languages, including Arabic and Japanese. That's one for those who read and think the other 51 languages, but we're glad he did his writing in our native tongue.

STOP A COLD IN THE EARLY STAGES

LANE'S COLD TABLETS

Valentino Case Goes to Jury

New York, Jan. 21 (Special).—The fate of Frank Valentino of Marlborough, farmer and gambler, as he described himself on the stand today in Federal Court where he is on trial for counterfeiting at Milton, was placed in the hands of the jury late this afternoon.

Both sides rested early this afternoon and summed up to the jury after motions made by counsel for Valentino to dismiss the complaint on various grounds were denied by Judge William Bondy. The defendant's counsel maintained that the government had not made out a prima facie case and that there was not sufficient evidence on which to allow the matter to go to the jury.

Several Marlborough witnesses preceded Valentino to the stand. For the most part they told an identical story, even to the food served at the "Valentino" farm on August 7. Gus Valentino, brother of Frank, was the first. He told the court he was in the car when Frank was arrested. He said four troopers were present. Two took Frank to the Valentino home and searched the premises there, looking for counterfeit bills. Others took him to the Marlborough Social Club and made a search of that place.

Gus told in detail just what he had to eat the evening of August 9. After questioning the witness as to how sure he was of the menu, Judge Bondy asked him to recite the menu of August 10. This Gus did very promptly and without hesitation. He only had a bowl of soup. Nearly every other night, in addition to other foods, he had chicken and spaghetti, he said.

Assistant United States Attorney Burke, who is prosecuting the case, carried on the cross-examination of the witness to discover why his memory was so especially good as to August 9, the day Frank was arrested. His memory of August 7, when the crime was alleged to have been committed, was also perfect. He had not discussed the case with anyone, however, he maintained.

Thomas Anodoe, of Marlborough, a chauffeur, and Albert Anodoe, Marlborough farmer, also testified for Valentino.

The witness finally took the stand in his own behalf. He answered the questions briefly and in a surly manner, becoming plainly annoyed as he was asked to answer questions put to him a second time. He at times would about at the district attorney or the judge when particularly harassed by questions he thought of no importance.

Asked to tell the story of what had occurred, he said the troopers came upon him and placed him under arrest on August 9. They searched him and took some bills out of his pocket.

"Was this one of them?" asked Burke, waving a counterfeit note before him.

"That's what they say," snapped the witness.

"Well, didn't you have this in your pocket?"

"I don't know anything about that. I never saw it before. And don't ask me about those bills. I don't examine every $5 bill I get. For all I know some of these may be counterfeit," he explained, taking a roll of bills from his pocket.

On direct examination Valentino said he was home the day the money was passed at Ed Young's garage at Milton. He left home about 9 o'clock in the evening and went to the Marlborough club to play stud poker. It was his lucky evening, he stated, and he stuffed the winnings in his pocket and went home.

Asked about the fact that his car was seen at Milton, he said he doesn't know about that. He lends his car to many people and they take it without asking him.

"Did you make any statement to troopers who arrested you?" asked his attorney.

"No statement." He said that other than asking to be shown the counterfeit bill that was allegedly found on him, and which request was denied, he said, he carried on no conversation with the arresting officers.

Burke asked Valentino what his occupation was. He said he was a farmer and worked for his father.

"For what salary?"

"No salary. When I want money I get it. If I want $50 or $100 or any amount I ask at the house and they give it to me."

Burke pursued the point and Valentino finally admitted that he was on the farm only part of the time. He spent the remainder at the Hotel Harlem in New York. He is a gambler, he said, and makes between $50 and $75 a week playing cards.

On summation, Valentino's attorney said that the prosecution of Valentino was just another crucifixion. He said he saw the representation of the first last year at Oberamungau. This crucifixion, he declared, was at the hands of the troopers, who are taking this means to square a gambling grudge against Valentino, with whom they had played cards. He referred to Sergeant Baker, whose father-in-law operates a hotel at New Paltz, when he said the hotel was protected by troopers through the entire prohibition era.

CAPITAL NEWS

HOLLISTER STURGES, JR., Albany, Jan. 22.—(Special).—

In a special message to the legislature last night Governor Herbert H. Lehman endorsed two recommendations made by his commission on unemployment relief that he appointed last August, for the purpose of making a detached and impartial study and evaluation of the administration of this social problem. The two steps call for immediate legislation for the extension of the temporary emergency relief administration from February 15, for one more year; and further legislation that will increase the membership from five to six members, appointed by the governor, and providing that one of them be a member of the State board of Social Welfare, and authorizing that attendance at meetings be extended to the commissioner of social welfare, with permission to participate in deliberations, but no right to vote.

These proposals somewhat parallel the three bills offered last week by Senator Arthur H. Wicks of Kingston, who introduced similar legislation on his party's behalf.

At the New York State Agricultural Society banquet to be held tomorrow evening a part of the program will be supplemented by members of the Plattkill Grange, who are to present a rural drama. A number of distinguished guests are to be present, including Governor Herbert H. Lehman; Lithgow Osborne, conservation commissioner; and Jared Van Wageningen, president of the society. Rexford Guy Tugwell, under secretary of agriculture, who was expected to be present, has been detained by important duties in Washington and will be unable to attend.

At last night's session Herbert Brownell Jr., New York Republican, introduced to the Assembly a bill which, if effective, will be another weapon in the fight against crime. Brownell made the statement that his introduction of this bill comes about as the result of law enforcement agencies and at the instigation of prosecutors and attorneys who believe that such an amendment to the penal laws will close a loophole through which members of the crime brain trusts now slip through the clutches of the law.

It declares, among other things, that "consorting with persons of evil reputation, thieves or criminals, shall be prima facie evidence that such consorting was for unlawful purpose and shall be deemed disorderly conduct."

"Under the present law," asserted Brownell, "police are required to furnish absolute proof that persons with evil reputations are consorting with criminals for an unlawful purpose. Forfeiting any possible criticisms on the constitutionality of the amendment, I have been informed that it is entirely constitutional because the rights of the suspected person are protected by allowing him or her the opportunity to disprove the presumption made under the terms of the law."

This bill has long been advocated by police authorities and prosecutors, and should in large measure be a movement toward erasing public enemies from the several communities.

It was announced here yesterday that two New York city Republicans would introduce into their respective chambers at tonight's session a bill providing for a thorough and complete study of the question relative to compensation by the state of persons injured by accidents in automobiles. Senator James C. Baldwin and Assemblyman Abbot Noffat are the joint introducers.

They say in part, "In New York state alone, we are killing about 2,500 and injuring over 30,000 (persons) annually. These accidents are not only a serious challenge to the community, but the financial loss and hardship that they cause is a vital and growing social problem for the entire state."

The two legislators list these as follows: Identification and location of the person causing the injury; waiting of months or years for case to come up; burden of proof of negligence on defendant's part and establishment of own innocence; risk of inadequate award; and inability to collect on judgment.

"We cannot leave the present system unimproved," they say. "It is obvious to anyone interested in social betterment, but it would be folly to adopt a remedy without a far more detailed knowledge of all pertinent facts than is now available."

Commissioner of Motor Vehicles Charles A. Harnett has repeatedly stated that he is in favor of compulsory liability insurance for drivers. In the state of Massachusetts the compulsory insurance law provides this.

It is the plan of these two representatives, however, for the highway users to pay compensation to the injured persons, and they would have a plan similar to the workmen's compensation laws. The commission, as set forth in this bill, provides that two members of the chamber, and three others appointed by the governor serve to make a thorough investigation of this matter.

A 365-day bargain

WOULDN'T it be exciting to find a genuine bargain every day in the year? There's one in your kitchen right now. Did you know that the daily bottle of milk you put in the refrigerator represents the biggest food-bargain you could possibly obtain?

Milk brings your body some 46 different kinds of things to help you keep healthy, alert, and filled with vitality. At a chemist's, these would cost more than $44. Yet you pay only a few cents a day for your quart of milk.

Penny for penny of all round food-value, milk is your greatest daily bargain. See that each child gets a quart a day, adults at least a pint. It will repay you a hundred-fold in health and happiness.

HEATING HINTS

.. by John Barclay

ONE way to cut the cost of heating your home is to avoid "Asphalt Wastes." By that I mean the amount of coal shaken through the grate before it has been completely burned. Here are a few precautions which will help you to cut down this waste:

1. Burn coal of the proper size. Every burner is designed to burn a particular size. Your dealer can help you decide this.
2. Shake the grate gently—and only when necessary to make room for fresh fuel.
3. Keep the ashpit clean and clear of ashes. This is most important... because the ashpit serves as a chamber from which air is supplied to the fire. Without an ample supply of air, complete combustion of the coal is impossible.
4. Use a high quality Pennsylvania hard coal.

Detroit and a few other towns that are bragging about surplusage had better be careful. Their creditors might start cracking down.

Talks to parents

Freedom

By BROOKE PETERS CHURCH
There was no fixed routine for anything in the Smith household. Mr. Smith was an artist, which made his hours more elastic than most men's, and Mrs. Smith did her own work, and so was not obliged to cater to the demands of maids.

Mr. and Mrs. Smith had a theory which suited their needs. "Habit makes slaves," and even when the children came along they continued to be guided by the whim and need of the moment.

Of course such a life was psychologically bad for everyone, and especially for the children. The parents, no doubt, could have lived and thrived on meals served at all hours, bed-time mixed with the rising hour, and work done at white heat when inspiration seized the artist. But it was not good for the children who were always delicate and ailing from lack of enough sleep and proper nourishment.

The effect on efficiency and adjustment to the demands of everyday life was, however, the worst feature of the system. When it came time for the children to attend school they found that although they had a fund of general information, and had read much and widely, they could not keep up with their classes nor make contacts with their fellow pupils. They were as apt as not to be late to school or miss a day entirely, and often they started from home with empty stomachs and no lunch basket.

Too many and too inelastic habits may be inhibiting, but a certain number are essential to efficiency. Once children have learned regularity of sleeping, eating, getting to school on time, dressing and undressing promptly, and regular hours for elimination, they are freed from the consideration of unimportant details, and given an opportunity to use their leisure moments in unbroken peace.

COURT NAMES RECEIVER FOR LOCAL CONCERN

New York, Jan. 21 (Special)—A voluntary petition in bankruptcy was filed today in United States District Court here by Louis and Ella Braunstein, residing at 284 Main street, Kingston, and in business as the Blue Bird Specialty Shop at 523 Wall street, Kingston. Later in the day, Andrew J. Cook of Kingston was appointed receiver by Judge Francis G. Caffey in bond of $1,500. The bankrupts list combined liabilities of $8,865 and assets of $7,389, the bulk of the latter being in real estate. The Home Owners Loan Corporation, Washington, is the principal creditor with a claim for $6,800 secured by a mortgage on the 284 Main street property. Other creditors include Kingston Trust Co., $355 loan, and Kingston Operating Co., $375 on rent.

Matron's Spring Frocks in Print

Print frocks like this one will be the backbone of our wardrobes for spring and summer. Figured silks grow more and more important. To set their ravishing beauty off—dresses, perforce, are being made unbelievable plain.

The slenderizing model pictured is an excellent choice for those who want to appear tall. Down the front a graduated panel does some interesting space breaking, and when the hem-line is reached, spreads itself in a graceful flare, arranged so that one's skirt appears slender, even though it's comfortably full.

Absence of contrast is a noticeable feature in certain print frocks. A feminine silhouette is here achieved through the use of one material. The collar is of a charming shape that does nobly by the matron of heavy girth. The back of it is made to fit the neckline properly, and the front to cascade over the bustline in irregular diagonals. One can scarcely imagine a style more becoming to large women with figure problems to measure.

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1574-B is designed in sizes 26, 28, 30, 32, 34, 36, 38, and 40. Size 36 requires about 4 1/2 yards of 35 inch material.

Tomorrow: Party dress for girls from eight to fourteen.

Sundown Stories

Anger

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER
"YOUR crow has stolen my wig!" He stole it while I was asleep, the scoundrel, the rascal, the wretch," shouted the little old man.

Now Willy Nilly fully remembered how Christopher had played a prank like this on the old man at the trial so that everyone had laughed. The man was cross and irritable by nature and that had not improved his temper.

It had made him vote against Christopher.

"How do you know he did?" asked Willy Nilly nervously.

"Because it is gone, and he is the only one who would have done such a thing," the man replied furiously. "But you do not know that he took it," asked Willy Nilly, feeling some relief.

"One else could have done it. I wear it to bed these chilly nights so my head won't feel cold, and I wake shivering. It's a wonder I didn't catch cold."

"I'm very glad you didn't," said Willy Nilly politely. "But here you come and accuse my crow of stealing your wig, and you do not know he took it at all. You're accusing him without knowing anything."

It was hard for Willy Nilly to talk because in his heart he, too, felt sure it had been Christopher's work. Christopher was having his revenge and was enjoying the prank.

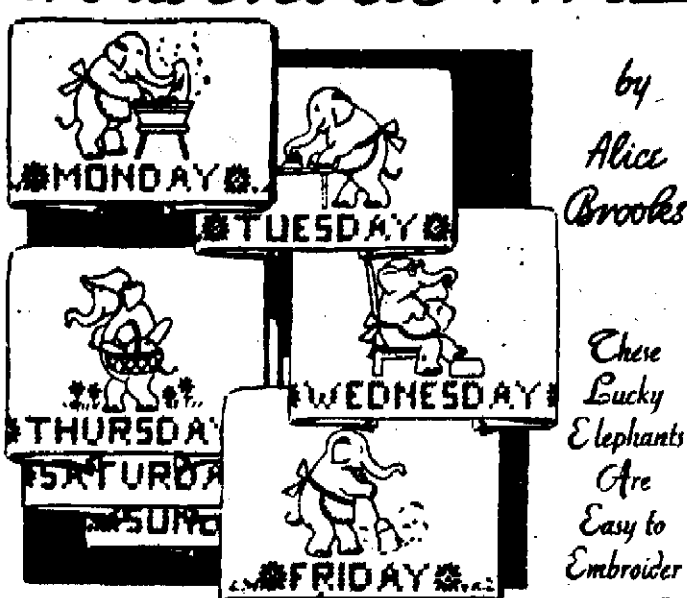

And it explained, too, why Christopher had taken so long in coming back with the package.

"Well, I know he took it, and I want it now! I can wear my old fur hat out-of-doors but I can't go into houses with a hat on."

"I have an idea!" cried Willy Nilly.

SUNNY LIVING starts at the table

How you feel and how you look depend largely on the foods you eat. The balanced menu provides the "fuel" to prevent common constitutional—caused by lack of this essential fuel.

Common constipation frequently causes headaches, loss of appetite and energy. Yet, in most cases, it can be overcome pleasantly and safely by eating a delicious cereal.

Kellogg's All-Bran is a natural food for normal individuals. It furnishes "fuel" to revitalize and rejuvenate your system. All-Bran also provides vitamin B and iron.

Isn't this cereal very better than taking patent medicines? Two tablespoons of All-Bran daily are usually sufficient. Chronic cases, with each meal, if needed, is not advised, on your doctor.

Serve All-Bran as a cereal, or use in cooking. Get the red-and-green package at your grocer's. Made by Kellogg's Battle Creek.

Rain and Sun
Not Up to Par

Ithaca, N. Y., Jan. 22.—Rainfall and sunshine averaged slightly below normal during December, according to the weather bureau of the United States Department of Agriculture at Cornell University.

The monthly report says that sunshine averaged about one-fourth of the possible amount, varying from eleven per cent at Oswego to fifty-five per cent at Mount Vernon. The month was slightly colder than a year ago.

Least rain fell in the lower Hudson Valley and in the west end of Long Island where it averaged nearly one and one-half inches below normal. There was also an average deficiency of about one-half inch in the central lakes region and in the western plateau. About one-half of the stations in the eastern plateau and in the Mohawk Valley reported an excess of rainfall.

Snowfall for the state averaged about one inch below normal. North Lake reported a monthly snowfall of fifty-two inches, while on Long Island only a trace of snow fell. No severe or damaging storms were reported in the state. At no time during the month was ice thick enough on Lake Erie to interfere with lake traffic, although navigation was officially closed on December 15.

The report mentions that the weather was mostly favorable for outdoor work. Winter grains and grasses were protected by a snow cover only part of the month, and much wood was cut on farms. Ice was not thick enough to be cut for storage.

FEELING FINE
AFTER 5 YEARS

Otisville Lady Tells How She Obtained Lasting Relief From Stomach Troubles, and Nervousness.

Here is convincing proof of the great virtue of Dr. French's Na-Erb, the scientific herb and root medicine now being introduced in Kingston by McBride Drug Stores.

MRS. SARAH HORTON, Otisville, N. Y., tells the following true story of her own personal experience:

"Five years ago I was suffering with my stomach. Food lay in my stomach like a heavy ball after every meal, causing heartburn, belching, and a sick feeling. I became very nervous, couldn't sleep nights and troubled daily with constipation. I used Na-Erb steadily for several weeks and at the end of that time was like a different person. The troubles with my stomach had all been overcome, my nerves were steady and bowels regular every day. 'I have been feeling fine ever since and have had no return of my former troubles.'"

Na-Erb is compounded from 12 of Nature's Finest Medicinal Plants, and acts on a habit-forming drug. IT MIXES WITH THE FOOD IN YOUR STOMACH, breaking off the acids and poisons that foster stomach troubles. At the same time it acts pleasantly on kidneys, liver and bowels. It is pleasant to take and results are quickly felt.

This famous scientific medicine is now being introduced in Kingston by McBride Drug Stores.—Adv.

Seek to Pass Law
To Allow More Bonds

Washington, Jan. 22 (AP).—The New Deal, finding itself within $2,500,000,000 of the bond limit, is now which it could not issue any more bonds, sought today to have its authority to sell such securities increased by about $5,000,000,000.

At the same time, Secretary Morgenthau disclosed what he termed a new "string of our currency law," a proposal that a new type of "baby bond" be issued for the general public, including persons of moderate means.

In denunciations ranging from $25 to $100,000, these bonds would be of 10 to 25 year maturity. They would be on a discount basis and would be expected to pay holders the equivalent of between 2 and 3 per cent.

Both proposals were laid before Congress yesterday in a bill introduced by Chairman Doughton of the House ways and means committee.

Sinkiang Is Described As Future Hotbed for Soviet-Tokyo Strife

Tokyo, Jan. 22 (AP).—Sinkiang, a huge northwestern territory nominally belonging to China, was indicated by statements in high official quarters today as the future scene of a contest between the expansionist ambitions of two great Asiatic powers, Japan and Soviet Russia.

A spokesman for the Japanese government said the Soviet's alleged economic and political penetration of Sinkiang "menaces the peace and stability of eastern Asia, which it is Japan's mission to maintain."

This development was mentioned by Koki Hirota, foreign minister, in a formal address to the Diet.

Describing the recent retirement of Chinese Communist armies from Kiangsi Province into Szechuan and Kwichow Provinces, Hirota stated that in view of this fact, coupled with the reported Sovietization of Sinkiang, the Japanese government will be obliged to watch with concern activities of the Communist party and its armies in China.

"Red Menace" Interest

With Manchoukuo's potentialities as a breeding ground for a possible Russo-Japanese conflict considerably lessened as a result of the virtual completion of negotiations for the sale of the Chinese Eastern Railway from Russia to Japan, Japanese imperialists are finding new evidences of a "Red menace" against this country's interest in Sinkiang.

The area of 550,000 square miles is rapidly falling under the domination of the Soviet like outer Mongolia, the foreign office spokesman said in amplifying Hirota's statement.

"Our information, which emanates from high Chinese officials, shows that the present leaders of Sinkiang are under the control of Moscow," he said.

China Should "Awake"

Hirota said China should "awake to a realization of the whole situation of East Asia and undertake to meet the genuine aspirations of our country."

"In view of our position as China's neighbor and as a stabilizing force in East Asia," he said, "it is our policy to try to assist China in the attainment of this goal."

Hirota made a broad and optimistic report on the foreign situation to the Diet, reconvening after the New Year's holiday. He reiterated Japan's desire for a new naval pact succeeding the Washington treaty, which she denounced.

Debs Turn Messenger Boys to Help Million Americans Say Happy Birthday to Roosevelt

With New England fishermen, western cowpunchers, northern lumberjacks and sedate metropolitan business men joining hands to stage Birthday Balls for the President in more than 5,000 cities and towns on January 30, the debutantes are doing their bit by turning messenger boys to help a million Americans say happy birthday to Mr. Roosevelt and thereby aid in the drive to raise funds to fight infantile paralysis. It's all made possible by a plan under which the Postal Telegraph Company, as its contribution, has offered to gather the names of all Americans wishing to aid the Birthday Ball movement and present these names to the President on the world's largest birthday greeting message. Postal officials throughout the country are accepting names at twenty-five cents each, the entire amount to be devoted to the war against infantile paralysis. Seventy cents of every dollar will return to the community raising it, the other 30 per cent going to the President's Birthday Ball Commission for Infantile Paralysis Research, of which Col. Henry L. Doherty is chairman. Right and left, child sufferers who will be aided by the novel birthday greeting plan in every city, (center) Miami, Fla., debs turning up names for the big message, and (below) American youngsters who will be spared the ravages of infantile paralysis if the disease is conquered in this country.

Tips on Contract

By TOM O'NEIL.

Suicide Squeezes

Most squeezes are executed by the play of all the cards of a long suit in one hand of the contracting partnership.

There are cases where an adversary, after due development of the play, is left with only one suit and squeezes his partner when forced into the lead. Henry Enoch of Bridge House, New York, has sent me this hand, played by the clever Mrs. Edna Marlowe, in illustration.

NORTH (DEALER)

The bidding was short and sweet: one spade by North and six no trump by South. Mrs. Marlowe reasoned that there was no reason to dilly dally in view of a vulnerable opening North in first position, her fit with North's suit and stoppers in the other suits.

Possibly had the bidding gone, one club, one diamond with a heart bid West before the six no trump was reached, the declarer's problem would have been easier.

West opened the top of his diamond doubleton and East's eight-spot was won by South's queen. Four rounds of spades were played. East discarding a heart and a club and West signaling on the fourth spade with the seven of hearts.

The last spade was taken in the North hand and the club Jack was finessed. The lead of the king of clubs showed West void, with the clubs bunching East.

Now came the time to deduce what West's original holdings were and Mrs. Marlowe did a pretty piece of card reading which enabled her to make the hand.

West obviously had three spades and one club originally. The question remained how many diamonds he had. On the lead of the diamond ace East played the nine. It was obvious that the opening lead was from a doubleton. If it had been fourth best, East would have had only one card higher than the four-spot by the rule of eleven, and he already had played the eight.

West, therefore, was counted for original possession of three spades, two diamonds, one club and seven hearts.

On South's lead to the kind of diamonds West played another heart. Mrs. Marlowe finessed the queen of hearts. West took with the king and had nothing left to lead but hearts. This was the squeeze trick. Being won by South's ace, it squeezed East so that he had to unguard the protected queen of clubs or give up a high diamond.

Here was the squeeze situation:

It might be called a squeeze plus an end play and a suicide squeeze.

Mississippi Police Find Legs of a Woman

Laurel, Miss., Jan. 22 (AP).—The severed legs of an apparently young woman, found beside a seldom traveled woodland road near here puzzled authorities today.

Chief of Police J. E. Brown of Laurel, and Deputy Sheriff J. C. Hamilton expressed the belief that the woman had been murdered and her body had been cut into portions and concealed in different places.

The limbs were discovered yesterday just over the Jones county line in Jasper county, north of here, by a negro rabbit hunter.

Brown said the legs had been severed and cut apart near the torso and that the portions below the knees were missing. He said they evidently belonged to a young woman weighing about 150 pounds and probably five feet eight inches in height.

The legs were found loosely bound in a sugar sack, but no blood was discovered at the scene.

A SUN BATH IN EVERY TABLET

Winter suns are weak in the rays which produce vitamin D. You need to supplement the sunshine with extra vitamin D. Otherwise, your body may become "run-down." Children require this precious sunshine vitamin to aid in growing sound bones and teeth.

McKesson's Vitamin Concentrate Tablets of Cod Liver Oil bring you plenty of vitamin D as well as vitamin A to build resistance, and needed supplies of calcium and phosphorus. There's a sun bath in every tablet—there's

Two More People Identify Hauptmann

Mr. Kelly asked the agent if he could produce the record, and he replied he thought he could. He said it is in Washington.

Mrs. Elsie Whately, wife of the Lindbergh butler, was recalled to the stand, to confirm the finding of a thumbguard by Betty Gow near the Lindbergh home, and to say that the lights in the Lindbergh home were on the night of the kidnapping.

Her testimony was considered to be for refutation of a defense hint that someone signalled with a light from the home the night of the crime.

The Gow testimony of the thumbguard was considered important for fixing the place of the baby's death. The state charged the kidnaper stripped the sleeping suit from the baby when he found it was dead, and in doing this caused the thumbguard to become detached from the baby's finger. Where Betty Gow found the thumbguard—and Mrs. Whately said she saw the nurse pick it up—in Hunterdon county, the county of Hauptmann's trial. The body was found in Mercer county.

The ladder, down which the state charges Hauptmann carried Baby Charles A. Lindbergh to his death on March 1, 1932, was admitted to evidence with New Jersey Trooper Lewis J. Brommann recalled to the stand.

Twice before the state offered the ladder and the defense succeeded in having it on the ground it had not been sufficiently identified, or sufficiently connected to Hauptmann.

The defense was just as vigorous in its objections today, but Justice Thomas W. Trenchard decided to accept it, nevertheless.

In the state's charges against Hauptmann the ladder is named virtually as the instrument of the Lindbergh baby's death.

It is charged that Hauptmann used the ladder to reach the window of the nursery of the Lindbergh home on March 1, 1932, that he stole the baby from his crib, and that the ladder broke as he descended with the baby in his arms, hurling the two to the ground and killing the baby.

Justice Trenchard indicated in admitting the ladder that he considered the testimony of the aged Amanda Hochmuth sufficient to connect it with the defendant. Hochmuth had testified that he saw Hauptmann in the forenoon of the day of the crime with a ladder in a dirty green automobile. This, he testified, was on a road leading to the Lindbergh home.

A New Jersey state trooper, Lewis J. Brommann, was recalled to the stand for the purpose of getting the ladder in. He repeated his testimony of several days ago in identifying the ladder parts.

During his cross-examination, the attorney general indicated with an interruption that the state might soon rest. He said he understood the defense chief, Edward J. Kelly, wanted to further cross-examine the aged agent Thomas H. Sisk, and added:

"This would be a good time before the state rests."

Court Room Packed.

Flemington, N. J., Jan. 22 (AP)—The possibility that today might see Bruno Richard Hauptmann open his fight to escape the electric chair for the murder of the Lindbergh child packed the Hunterdon county court house long before trial time.

Hauptmann, pale and thin-lipped, was scheduled to be the first witness in his own behalf and the spectators lucky enough to get in were hopeful the state would rest early enough today to permit the alien ex-convict to tell his own story.

Indications, however, were that the defense was due for a disappointment, for informed quarters considered it unlikely that proceedings would be so speedy that the state would rest and Hauptmann reach the stand.

Snowy Weather.

Outside the poorly lighted court room the air was gray with whirling snowflakes. The early morning rain and sleet storm, which failed to keep down the trail attendance, gave way to the heavy snow just as the court-house doors opened.

Millard Whitely, the Southland Mountain lumberjack and Lindbergh neighbor, was an early comer to the seats reserved for the state witnesses. He is waiting to swear that he saw Hauptmann prowling about the Lindbergh estate twice just prior to the kidnapping.

Ladder in Court.

The kidnap ladder was brought in and rested against the wall near the jury box. A large easel-like wood rack was set up next to it. None of the officials of the prosecution staff professed to know just what its purpose was. Speculation was it would be used in connection with the ladder testimony.

Mrs. Hauptmann was standing waiting at the defense table when the prisoner was led in. She flashed him a bright encouraging smile, and soon they had launched into their regular morning chat. As they talked a parade of state troopers carried a large number of new exhibits, carefully wrapped.

Justice Thomas W. Trenchard, counsel and witnesses, arrived in court earlier than usual.

Most of counsel and the witnesses are in court ten minutes before trial time.

Inspector John J. Lyons, the New York detective who played such a prominent role in the ransom money investigation, may not be able to testify today, as the state had asked to have him.

John J. Lyons in NY.

Assistant Attorney General Robert Brock said the inspector was sick and in New York under a doctor's care. The inspector, however, said, did advise the state later whether he could appear.

Justice Trenchard called the court open at 10:33 and the jury was seated. Concerning time was latest since the trial began three days ago.

James J. Foley, Bronx district attorney, appeared in court at 10:33 and took his seat near the prosecution table. He waited at the court of camera man.

Col. Lindbergh and Col. W. Norman Schwarzkopf, superintendent of state police, took seats as the jury being polled after court convened.

Produces a Chisel.

The attorney general produced a chisel and the witness said he found it at the Lindbergh estate near where the ladder was picked up early in the morning after the kidnapping, March 2, 1932.

"We offer the chisel in evidence," Wilentz announced.

Associate Defense Counsel Frederick A. Pope objected to its acceptance because it had not been linked with the defendant or with the crime of kidnapping-murder, but Justice Trenchard admitted it.

"Mr. Attorney General, I am satisfied it should go in evidence," the justice said.

Wilentz directed the witness's attention to the ladder upright which had been cut through for purposes of wood analysis, and investigation.

The detective said he himself had saved the upright through at the state police headquarters.

Q. So detective, these three sections of the ladder are the same as when it was found, with exception of the numbers put on and the cuts made in the investigation?

A. The same.

Wilentz Offers Ladder.

Wilentz then offered the ladder in evidence. Previous attempts had been unsuccessful.

Pope immediately objected, "for the same reasons as before."

The ladder was taken apart, he argued, it was in possession of many people and "in many parts of the country."

He named Dr. E. W. Hudson, of New York, a criminologist, who made a report that more than 500 fingerprints had been found on the ladder, as one of those who examined it. He mentioned the states' expert, Arthur J. Koehler, wood technologist, also.

Pope Offers Angle.

Pope said the defense would not object if the court could be satisfied that the ladder was in the same condition as when found.

He asked that each person who had custody of the ladder be produced to tell what he did with it.

"We submit," Pope concluded, "that the history of this ladder has not been told."

"No one has ever suggested," Pope added, "that this defendant had anything to do with this ladder."

Wilentz rose to address the court in reply, but Trenchard interrupted.

"Wonder whether Mr. Pope recalls the testimony of an old gentleman who on March 1st I think it was that he saw a ladder in the defendant's car."

The jurist's reference was to the testimony of Amanda Hochmuth, who placed Hauptmann near the Lindbergh estate the day of the kidnapping.

Pope renewed his argument, asserting he had never known a criminal case in the state in which an exhibit was admitted without showing its direct connection with the defendant.

Trenchard Hears Wilentz.

"I think I will hear the attorney general," said Justice Trenchard.

Wilentz said the state had satisfactorily traced the custody of the ladder from the time of the crime to the present.

He emphasized that whatever experiments had been made, were designed to help the court and the jury decide the innocence or guilt of the defendant.

"We have proved the custody of this ladder," Wilentz argued.

"We have proved that, with these few exceptions, it is as it was found when brought up 'Lindy's Lane' the night of the kidnapping."

Pope was on his feet once more, retracing the ground he had covered on his previous objections and offering new ones.

Trenchard Admits Ladder.

"I feel constrained to admit this ladder in evidence," the justice said, at the end of Pope's last argument.

"It will be admitted," he said. It was a distinct victory for the state, for the defense during the past three weeks had been able to block the exhibit each time the ladder was offered.

Wilentz picked up a dowel pin, which Brommann testified had been found with the ladder.

Pope objected.

Repeats Admission.

"It will be admitted," Justice Trenchard said.

The pin was allegedly that joining the first and second sections of the ladder, and fell out when the contrivance broke under the weight of the kidnaper and the baby.

Pope took the trooper-detective for cross-examination.

After questioning Brommann about his rank in the state police, Pope switched to the custody of the ladder.

He was told that after the ladder was found on the Lindbergh estate it was placed in the custody of Trooper Frank Kelly, fingerprint and identification expert.

Q. Did Dr. Hudson examine the ladder?

A. I have no knowledge of it.

Q. Do you know Dr. Hudson?

A. No, sir.

Q. Was it examined for fingerprints?

A. I have no knowledge of that.

I turned it over to Trooper Kelly.

Brommann said he worked on the ladder at the state police barracks near Trenton with Koehler.

Wilentz Interrupts.

Wilentz interrupted the proceedings to explain that Edward J. Kelly wanted an opportunity to cross-examine Thomas H. Sisk, federal agent who participated in Hauptmann's arrest.

"This would be a good time before the state rests," Wilentz explained.

Sisk, the boyish looking federal agent at whom Hauptmann yelled, "Hello, you are lying," last week, took the stand.

Reilly Questions Sisk.

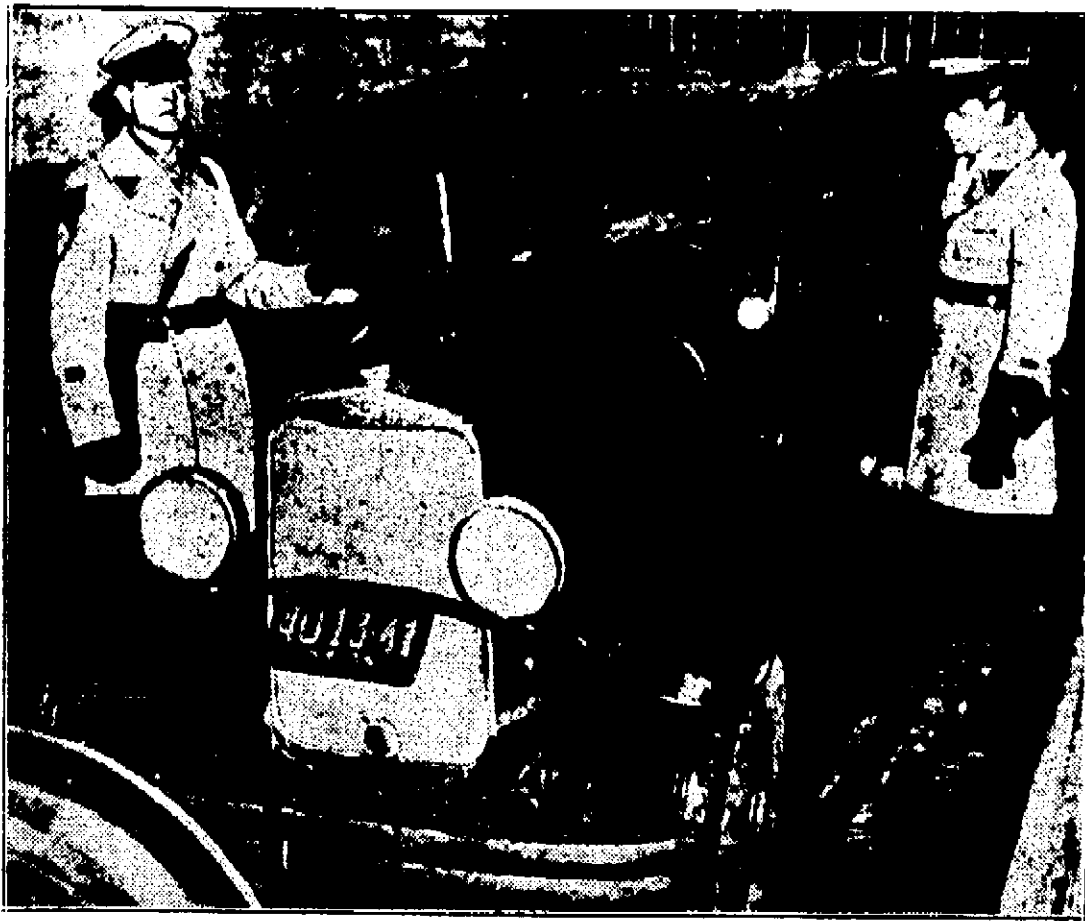

Reilly asked him if he had produced confidential department of justice reports on the case. The witness nodded in the affirmative.

Reilly, walking slowly toward the witness, carrying a sheet of papers, began questioning him on his experience in the case and cooperation of federal, New York and New Jersey authorities.

Sisk said copies of reports of federal activities were sent to Col. Schwarzkopf.

Reilly turned to the lighting of the

HAUPTMANN AUTO AT TRIAL SCENE

The prosecution in the trial of Bruno Richard Hauptmann at Flemington, N. J., for the murder of the Lindbergh baby, was expected to request the court to permit the jury to view the car which Hauptmann was driving at the time of his arrest, shown above in the court house yard in the custody of State Troopers. The state expects to prove that the "kidnap-ladder" could have been carried in the machine. (Associated Press Photo.)

Q. During the time of the payment of the ransom money and the arrest of Hauptmann did you visit every bank in greater New York and Westchester?

Visits Banks.

A. We visited banks with New Jersey State Police and the New York Police at various times.

He asked if Sisk had received the information on the ransom bill which Hauptmann passed at the gas station. Sisk said he had.

Q. When was the identification made of the $20 bill in Hauptmann's wallet?

A. That was made within a few minutes after it was taken from him after his arrest by a detective.

Q. Did you ever talk to Dr. Condon (ransom intermediary) about the ransom money?

A. Yes.

Q. Did you ever find the ransom money box?

A. No.

Q. Did you ever have Dr. Condon imitate the voice of "John" and record it on victrola records?

A. We did. It was on one record.

We have it in Washington.

Reilly asked if Sisk could produce the record and the witness said he thought he could.

Q. When did you come into the case?

A. November, 1933.

Q. Were you at the home of Hauptmann the night before the arrest?

A. I was.

Q. Weren't there other police there, watching?

A. Yes.

Q. Was Hauptmann home that night?

A. I don't know of my own knowledge.

Questions On Cast.

Q. Now isn't it a fact, Mr. Sisk, that a plaster cast of the foot of the man who collected the ransom was taken by someone?

A. I wasn't working on the case at the time.

Q. Wasn't that cast made and taken by Dr. Condon's son-in-law?

Wilentz was on his feet waving objections against the line of questioning.

"I submit," said Reilly, "it was not Hauptmann's and, under the rules of evidence, we should be entitled to ask this witness what he knows about it."

Justice Trenchard directed that Sisk answer.

Cast Was Taken.

"I learned," Sisk stated, "that a cast of a footprint was taken, but there was no positive connection between that and the man who took the ransom."

It was taken on a fresh grave near a retaining wall 15 or 20 feet from the point where Dr. Condon said he turned the money over in St. Raymond's cemetery."

Reilly asked Sisk where the report was which dealt with the plaster cast.

"In my New York office."

Q. Can you bring it here?

A. We have a ruling in our department that all our reports are the property of the Attorney General of the United States.

Sisk explained that he could surrender the reports only on order from the U. S. attorney general.

Reilly To Ask For Records.

Reilly then announced he would wire the attorney general at Washington and ask him to turn the reports over to the defense "in the interest of justice."

He likewise announced he would call Sisk as a witness for the defense. The agent smiled wryly when he heard this. He was then excused.

James J. Finn, New York city detective, came forward next to tell of his investigation of the $25 certificate, allegedly issued by Hauptmann to the ticket seller at the Sheridan Theatre, New York.

Finn Tells of Bill.

Finn said he showed the ticket seller, Mrs. Cecile Harr, the bill and she identified it.

Finn was excused without cross-examination.

Mrs. Elsie Whately, widow of the Lindbergh butler, came back to make her second appearance on the witness stand.

Wilentz drew corroborating testimony from Mrs. Whately on the finding of the baby's thumbguard by Nursemaid Betty Gow.

Mrs. Whately pointed the discovery of the guard about 144 yards from the gate at the end of the Lindbergh lane. It was found, she said, as she and Miss Gow were returning on the lane from the gate after a walk.

She identified the guard and said she was going home to dinner and house the night of the kidnapping.

Q. Were the lights in the house on all the time that evening?

A. Yes, they were.

The defense cross-examination of Miss Gow had insinuated that the lights had been flashed as a possible signal to the kidnaper.

The Lindbergh housekeeper spoke in an almost inaudible voice. She apologized to the attorney general that she had a bad cold.

She identified the black suitcase which was in the Lindbergh nursery underneath the kidnap window the night of the crime.

"Mrs. Lindbergh brought the baby's clothes down in it."

Suitcase in Evidence.

Wilentz offered the suitcase in evidence. There was no objection from the defense.

Reilly then, began cross examination.

Her husband, she said, was reading in the servants' sitting room.

Reilly questioned her closely on the lights in the rooms of the home.

Q. The second floor you know nothing about?

A. Yes, I do.

She described the lighting in her own quarters; in the hall of the second floor, and the nursery.

Reilly Turns to Thumbguard.

Reilly turned then to the thumbguard and the weather conditions at the time of its discovery.

Reilly kept referring to the thumbguard as "the mud guard," and spectators tittered frequently.

Q. How long was that road from the Lindbergh house to the gate?

A. Nearly a mile.

Q. How wide is the patch, ten or twelve feet?

A. Yes.

Tells of Heavy Traffic.

The defense chief then went to work to bring out how heavy the traffic was over that road during the time the thumbguard reputedly laid there undiscovered.

He took the witness over the details of her story on the finding of the thumbguard by Betty Gow.

Q. Did you see her bend down and pick it up?

A. I did.

Q. Who saw it first?

A. We both saw it together.

Court recessed for 5 minutes at 11:21 and Mrs. Whately was excused.

The jury filed back at 11:32 and court resumed.

Millard Whitely was the first witness.

During the recess Reilly said that the cast of the foot print had been compared with Hauptmann's and found not to be his.

He said this would be put in evidence by the defense.

He also hopes to have the phonographic record of Condon's imitation of "John's" voice played for the jury.

Whited Very Solemn.

Whited's deeply lined face was solemn as he took the oath and climbed to the stand. His large, muscular hands—hands of a logger—were clasped tightly in his lap.

He spelled his last name slowly for the stenographer and began to answer questions. Deep wrinkles appeared on his forehead, from which his brown hair was receding.

Q. From the 1st day of February until the 1st day of March, 1932, where did you live with relation to the Lindbergh estate?

A. I lived about a mile and a half from the Lindbergh estate.

Q. Did you own a farm there?

A. I did.

Q. Did your farm adjoin the Lindbergh estate?

A. There was a ten foot strip between my farm and the Lindbergh estate.

Wilentz had him relate how he occupied himself at farming and lumbering.

Q. How many years did you live near the Lindbergh estate?

A. Fall in 1932 to late in 1932.

Whited declared he knew every person who lives in the vicinity.

Q. Did you see any strangers?

A. Yes.

Names Hauptmann.

Q. Did you see Bruno Richard Hauptmann?

A. I did.

Q. When did you see him?

A. About the 14th of February.

Q. Did you see him again?

A. I did.

Q. When was it?

A. Between the 25th and the 27th of February.

Q. This was the February before the Lindbergh kidnapping?

A. It was.

Whited pointed the ground which he was going home to dinner and the new Hauptmann map out of the woods

"on my left."

"I wondered why and where he came from," the logger added.

Q. So that on the second time you were only six feet away from him?

A. That's right.

Q. How close or how far away were you from him the first time?

A. About eight feet.

Whited said that early in the morning of March 2, 1932, he was questioned by police at the estate.

Q. Is there any doubt in your mind that the man you saw was this defendant?

A. No, sir.

Whited said he saw Hauptmann again at the extradition proceedings in New York.

Q. You were at your house the night of the kidnap?

A. Mr. Lindbergh, Wolf, the trooper, Lieutenant Keating or Keaten, and two others I don't know.

Vines the Greatest, Says Big Bill Tilden

In the King of All Present Day Tennis According to the Old Maestro—Tilden Hanks Others After "Elly".

Detroit, Jan. 22 (AP).—Big Bill Tilden, 42 years "young" and still knowing a trick or two about tennis, today described Ellsworth Vines as the "greatest player in the world to-day and probably the greatest player the game has ever seen."

Here with Vines, George Lott and Lester Stofen for the ninth stand in an exhibition tour which will take in every corner of the nation, the man who many consider the greatest competitor the game ever has produced had this to say about the young California star:

"There isn't a player in the game today that can touch Vines and without a doubt he's the greatest player in the world today. It's impossible to really compare a player of today with one of yesterday, because the game progresses and the greatest player of today really should be the greatest the game ever has seen."

"I dislike trying to compare Vines with Cochet or stating that Lenglen was better than Vines—and I think she was—but I do think that in all probability there never was a player better than Elly."

After Vines, Tilden listed the following players as the best he has ever met: Henri Cochet, Bill Johnston, Hans Nusslein, Karl Kozeluh, Norman Brooks, Gottfried Von Gramm, K. Norris Williams, Jean Borotra and Rene La Coite. He made it plain that he was not listing them in the order of their ability.

Port Ewener Gets Hit Off of Dizzy Dean

Wilson Tinney, a resident of Port Ewener, spending the winter in Palmetto, Florida, a suburb of Bradenton, the spring training camp of the world champion St. Louis Cardinals, recently had the honor of getting a hit off the Cards' star pitcher, Dizzy Dean.

Strictly speaking it was not a hit as far as true baseball is concerned but nevertheless it was a good hard wallop in the nature of a centerfield fly. It all happened in batting practice before a recent baseball game between the Kiwanis and Rotary Clubs of Bradenton and Rotary Club of Port Ewener. Tinney stepped up to the plate and socked the old apple tossed by Dizzy deep into centerfield where one of the small army of fielders stationed there tucked it away in his mitt. Tinney did not play in the game. Dizzy Rhodes of the Red Sox caught for Paul Dean.

Sanders Will Get The Slugger Trophy

Durham, N. C., Jan. 22 (AP).—Rolling up an average of .423, Jimmy Sanders, outfielder-manager of the Martinsville, Va., club of the B. State League, stood out today as the champion slapper of the minor leagues. He will be awarded the Louisville slugger trophy.

Sanders' mark not only topped the minor leagues, but made him king of organized baseball, since he was far ahead of the major league leaders, Lou Gehrig of the New York Yankees with .363 and Paul Waner of the Pittsburgh Pirates with .362.

Sanders was declared the winner after receipt of most minor league averages at headquarters of the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues.

Baers Prove That They Can Punch

Tampa, Fla., Jan. 22 (AP).—Six thousand fans were ready to testify today that the Baers—Max, the world's heavyweight champ, and Buddy, the 220-pound little brother—can punch.

They saw Max toy with Tony Canzoneri, a home town boy of no little ability, and then shake him to his knees in a four-round exhibition match last night. Buddy knocked out Marty Hogan, 210, of Salem, Mass., 21 seconds after the opening bell.

Ross and Klick Reach Peak for Their Fight

Miami, Fla., Jan. 22 (AP).—Barney Ross smiled at everyone today. Frankie Klick glowered.

Their handlers nodded heads and said these were signs that each had reached his peak for their bout Thursday night in which Klick will try to live the "Boss" synthetic Junior heavyweight title.

Both warriors were ordered for both reasons to avoid dishing the edges of their contrasting fighting tempers.

SPORT SLANTS

by Pap

Bobby Jones, still the emperor of golfdom to many, wisely enough does not feel that "a king can do no wrong." He realizes, perhaps better than anyone, the mistake he made last spring when he took on the field in the Masters' Tournament at the Augusta (Ga.) National Golf club without sufficient tuning up.

Jones is not going to be caught napping again this year, if he can help it. He'll profit by that unpleasant experience, be sure of that.

He discovered that playing friendly practice matches did not remove the rust acquired in the absence from tournament play.

Having learned his lesson, he has embarked on an exhibition tour, playing real matches of the stiffest competition available, which he hopes will bring him to the second edition of the Masters' in April ready to give a better account of himself.

Coming Close Doesn't Count

Bobby played fine golf in the tournament last year, finishing ahead of many leading professionals and being tied with Denny Shute, who was the British open champion at the time. But the only sort of golf satisfactory to Jones is winning golf.

His golfing skill is as sound as ever so the flock of stiff matches should help him regain the renowned "Jones" touch if it is at all possible. On any occasion when his putter is functioning Jones is still the most dangerous shotmaker in the game.

Unless he can come mighty close to his former peak, he can hardly hope for complete revenge. This year's Masters' tourney promises to rival the national open in strength and brilliance.

A group of Europe's outstanding club swingers will be on hand along with the elite of our native golfers. A cast of 75 will be invited to battle it out for the 15 prizes worth $6,000.

Henry Cotton Heads Invaders

Heading the foreign invaders will be Henry Cotton, holder of the British open championship. Cotton had hoped to make the trip to these shores as a member of the British Ryder cup team. His affiliation and residence at Brussels, Belgium, club, however, made him ineligible for his quest for glory and gold will be of an entirely personal nature.

Additional bits of international flavor will be added in Auguste Boyer, Swiss open champion, and Alf Padgham, reputed to be one of England's finest professionals and winner of the German open. Aubrey Boomer, of St. Cloud, will also be there.

Horton Smith can look for a difficult time in trying to repeat the triumph he registered in the inaugural 72-hole test.

Paul Runyan and Olin Dutra, holders of the professional and open championships, respectively, will be among the stars honored with invitations. Lawson Little will be in there doing his best for the amateur cause.

Craig Wood, who finished a stroke behind the victorious Smith last year, will be in the lists along with Ky Lafoon, Denny Shute, Leo Diegel, Gene Sarazen, Tommy Armour, Walter Hagen and just about any top notch golfer you can name.

The tournament takes on the picture of a real golfing festival with the driving contest and a Scotch best ball foursome affair in addition to the two days of tournament play.

Lots of Action Promised In Legionnaire-Union City Game

That the Union City Reds are in for a tough battle at the Municipal Auditorium Wednesday night when they play the Kingston Legionnaires is indicated not alone by the way the whole local team has been fighting on the court, but especially by the brand of play Captain Carlie Huata displayed at Arcadia Hall, Brooklyn, Sunday.

The Kingston mainstay, playing with the Boston Trojans, dumped in four fields and three fouls for 11 points, highest individual score of the game. This rough and ready veteran of the court was the only one able to successfully break through the defense of the New York Jewels, who won the battle, 34-21.

Frank Shimek, Huata's teammate on the Kingston team, and leading scorer of the New York State League, was in the Boston lineup, too, but his reputation traveled far ahead of him, causing the Jewels to bear down on him. "Shimek" was held to one field and two fouls, something unusual.

The Jewels are champions of the first half of the American League schedule. Kingston won the first half championship of the State League and is well on the way to copying the second. So far the club has won 17 straight games and lost only one.

Counting League and exhibitions, Kingston has 23 victories to its credit and only four setbacks. The Huatas have scored 835 points against 655 for their opponents.

Having sufficient rest since their campaign against the champions, Huata and Shimek are ready to participate in Wednesday's exhibition at the auditorium, which promises to be one of the liveliest court attractions here this season.

More Trouble.

Indications are that the Legion-

naire might have much more trouble with the Reds than with the Newark Mules, whom they defeated in a sensational battle last week. Score of the duel was 39-29, the result of nip and tuck tussle until the last two minutes when Kingston cut loose to roll up nine points.

Frank Shimek was the star in the offensive, gleaming 21 points, while the rest of the Legionnaires played Class A ball, exhibiting a brand of pass-work that surpassed any seen this season.

Shimek is ready for action tomorrow, as is his teammate, Captain Huata. They will do their regular trick in the guard positions. Bill Hamilton will jump center and "Hawk" Kurtyka and Plo Koehler will start as forwards. Bobby Culum and Tommy Weems will be in reserve.

Regulars Coming.

The Reds will send all of their regulars here. Willie Scull, veteran of the cage sport; Paulie Adamo, one of the club's best shots; "Andy" Anderson, former N. Y. sensation, who made 14 points for the Union against Philadelphia Hebrews Sunday; Bob Synott; and Eddie Benson, who appeared here with Albany against the Legionnaires.

Preliminary to the feature, the Kennells will meet a formidable club. Concluding the program will be dancing with music by Paul Zucca's orchestra.

After Wednesday the Legionnaires will have a busy schedule. Thursday they will at North Hampton, Mass. Friday in Springfield, Mass. Saturday in Gloucester or Schenectady, and Sunday in Rochester.

He Took a Chance

The manuscript of "Robinson Crusoe" was rejected by almost every publisher in London, till at last a lucky publisher took a chance on it, having got it almost for nothing.

Al Lopez Predicts Lead for Dodgers

New York, Jan. 22 (AP).—Al Lopez, peppy first string catcher, returned his signed contract to the Brooklyn Dodgers today with the prediction the club will finish in the first division this year.

The Cuban wrote he bases his optimism on the youth of the club, together with the fact it was playing 100 per cent better ball at the close of last season than at the first.

Recalls Keeping Time At Fight for Title

Senator Barbour of New Jersey Regards Holding Watch for Willard-Dempsey Scrap as Great Adventure—Recalls Story of First Round.

Washington, Jan. 22 (AP).—None of his adventures in Congress or as national amateur heavyweight boxing champion brought Senator Warren Barbour, New Jersey Republican, the thrill he got as a beligerent timekeeper during the Willard-Dempsey fight.

The young and tigerish Dempsey rained damaging blows on the body of the champion under broiling sun that day at Toledo 16 years ago. Old Jess fell to the floor. A slightly deaf referee, Pecora, began counting the fatal 10. The bell rang, ending the first round but Pecora didn't hear it.

Thousands of fans were on their feet yelling and shouting their approval of this youth who had cut down the massive Willard.

"No one paid me any mind as I signalled frantically that the round had ended—that the bell had saved Willard," Barbour recalled.

"I kept yelling until I caught Pecora's attention. There was a loud squawk from the Dempsey bunch but I stood by my guns and the fight was continued."

The husky New Jersey solon, biggest man in Congress, might have been a professional career. But he decided on a business life, and has never been sorry.

He battered two rivals to win the amateur championship one night in 1910. One of the sparring partners of the 215 pound youngster in those days was Al Reich, bodyguard of Dr. John "Jasie" Condon, Hauptmann trial witness.
